TAIPO ROAD SMASH
TWO HUNDRED FOOT DROP MISSED BY INCHES
GOOD SAMARITAN THANKED
Mr. C. L. Rocha, of 231 Prince Edward Road, Kowloon, had a narrow escape from serious injury as the result of a motor mishap which occurred on the Taiipo Road on Saturday afternoon.
As he was approaching the 175-milepost, a dog ran across the road at a point where repairs are in progress, the road being very slippery. Mr. Rocha averted to avoid the dog, and in doing so his car badly skidded.
For a moment, it seemed that the car might dash over the embankment at a point where there was a sheer drop of some 200 feet, but showing great presence of mind, Mr. Rocha managed to keep it on the road and steer it straight into the wall of a cutting.
The front part of the car was badly damaged, whilst Mr. Rocha suffered injuries when the driving wheel was forced against his chest. His face was also badly bruised.
Luckily, an unknown motorist who was proceeding in the opposite direction turned back and rendered assistance to Mr. Rocha, who was later taken to hospital for treatment. He has since been discharged.
Mr. Rocha wishes to express thanks to his helper, who not only rendered him personal aid but also arranged for the damaged car to be towed back to Kowloon.

Nanking, June 11.
The whereabouts of Mr. Kuramoto, Japanese vice-consul at Nanking, still remains a mystery, despite the efforts of the local gendarmerie, and the detective branch, who have scoured the whole city without securing the slightest clue.
It is conjectured in one quarter that he may have left the capital on a private tour of the surrounding districts.
It is reported from Shanghai that some person or persons claimed to have sighted Mr. Kuramoto passing along a Street at Hongkew yesterday in a motor car. The observer said that "Mr. Kuramoto" seemed to be making a hasty trip towards the Bund, where he might have caught a Daifun-bound steamer.
Commenting on this report, a Japanese spokesman stated that it was merely a rumour.
The Nanking authorities say that any suggestion that Mr. Kuramoto might be the victim of a kidnapping gang is almost unbelievable, as no kidnapping case had ever occurred in the capital.—Central News

By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic News Agency, Ordinance, 1934. Received June 11, 7.55 a.m.
Washington, June 10.
Japanese official circles, strenuously engaged for some time past in efforts to improve relations between Japan and the United States, are considering the possibilities of a dramatic mid-Pacific meeting between President Roosevelt and highly-placed Japanese emissaries.
The President is expected to sail for Honolulu as soon as possible after the closure of the present session of Congress and Japanese leaders have readily seized upon the suggestion that the opportunity be taken for friendly conversations at this half-way house.
Observers point out that Prince Chichibu would be eminently suited for the mission on account of his popularity in the United States, his high rank and his relationship with the Emperor.
Such a meeting of Prince Chichibu and President Roosevelt would be highly significant from the Japanese viewpoint as the Prince has just concluded a good-will visit to Manchukuo.—United Press

WATCHMAN GETS JUDGMENT
PROMISSORY NOTE CLAIM
Kwong Tat Shing Tong, alias Kwong Wo, No. 1 night watchman of the South China Morning Post, was the successful plaintiff in a claim before the Chief Justice, Mr. A. D. A. MacGregor, this morning for $4,480 odd, the amount of two promissory notes and interest.
Defendant was Chan How-chuen, c/o Tai Ping Theatre, Des Voeux Road West, and he did not appear in Court.
Mr. H. C. Macnamara, instructed by Mr. F. G. Nigel, of Johnson, Stokes, and Masters, appeared for plaintiff and gained judgment for the whole amount claimed and costs.
Kwong Tat, brother of the plaintiff, said he lent the money out for Kwong Wo.
Plaintiff said that about five years ago he became entitled to about $8,000 from his father's estate and gave it to his brother to invest. When he tried to call in some of the money on promissory notes a year ago, defendant asked for time. Not a cent of the loan had been repaid.

The great expansion of Japanese trade that has followed her mercantile invasion of the Caribbean is further revealed by Department of Commerce reports on Haitian foreign trade.
The report shows that during the first seven months of the Haitian fiscal year, which started in October last year, Japan had furnished more than fourteen per cent. on Haitian imports, taking a leap into second place.
The only country supplying more in, naturally, the United States, which provided no less than fifty-three per cent. of the total, although this percentage is lower than the U.S.A. has been accustomed to expect.
Imports from Japan have gained steadily in the last two years, although Japan is taking only one-tenth per cent. of the total Haitian exports.—United Press

SPAIN'S SUBTERRANEAN WAR BETWEEN THE SOCIALISTS AND GOVERNMENT
THOUSANDS ARRESTED IN PEASANT STRIKE
Madrid, June 10.
A grim underground struggle between the Socialists and the Government is being relentlessly pursued. Political tension is acute and observers prophesy a desperate flare-up unless the situation undergoes a dramatic change.
Ruthless methods are being employed by the Government in efforts to stamp out the wave of popular reaction and thousands of political prisoners have been incarcerated in the last week or two.
The great strike of agricultural workers in Badajoz Province, affecting thousands of farm labourers, continues without a sign of a settlement.
The strikers proclaim that they are prepared to see the finest harvest for half a century rot in the fields rather than yield to the demands of their employers.
They say that they have starved for two years and can starve for a bit longer. At least a hundred and fifty thousand men are affected.
Fierce fighting between the agricultural workers and the civil guards continues intermittently.
THOUSANDS IN PRISON.
The prisons in hundreds of small townships in the South of Spain are overflowing with thousands of peasants, who have been arrested for "coercion" during the peasants' strike.
Growing hostility to the existing regime is illustrated by two further events during the week-end, revealing the Fascist organisation as the chief point of attack.
An attempt was made on the life of Jose Primo de Rivera, son of the late Dictator, and one of the principal figures in the Fascist Party. The front of his car was riddled with bullets, but Jose escaped unhurt.
STONED TO DEATH.

VICTIMS' CASES UNDER REVIEW
Contributors to the Fund instituted by the Telegraph for the relief of sufferers in the gasworks disaster will be interested to learn that the administration of the monies subscribed is still being proceeded with.
In addition to the emergency cash grants made, further sums have now been distributed in cases which have undergone review. The process of reviewing the worst cases is still continuing.
Excellent use has also been made of the funds by getting up in business some of the sufferers who lost all their belongings in the disaster.
In one case, in which nine members of a family were burned to death, including the father (a shoemaker), the widow and other survivors have been supplied with leather, tools, machine, etc.
In another case, in which a father and son were burned to death and the mother and baby severely burned, the widow has been supplied with a hawkers' licence and money with which to buy baskets and flowers. She has to report again to the distributing centre later.
Applications have also been made for hawkers' licences for other women who lost their possessions in the fire, and the police have been most considerate and helpful in these cases.

SIXTEEN INJURED AT CHAOYANG
Peking, June 11.
The compound of the Chaoyang University threatened to become a battle arena yesterday when hostile groups of students attempted to settle a dispute by a free fight.
The timely arrival of a contingent of armed police stopped it before it developed seriously.
The trouble arose out of a dispute on Saturday over the allotment of seats in the dining hall of the university to students from Honan and Kwangtung which developed into a provincial feud. Sixteen students were injured.

Frederick Delius, the famous British composer, died to-day at his home near Paris, Grez-sur-Loing, being the third of England's most eminent musicians to pass away within a few weeks.
Virtually an invalid in the closing years of his life, he had since 1924 suffered from the additional handicap of blindness, and was generally referred to as the Blind Composer.
His mind remained clear and active in spite of his blindness and of his partial paralysis caused by multiple sclerosis. Whenever it was fine, he was taken down to sit in his garden, and thanks to wireless he was able to listen to concerts, including performances of his own works.
In 1929, Eric Fenby, a young Yorkshireman, went to Grez and a system of musical dictation was worked out by them which enabled Delius to compose more easily and stimulated his creative faculty with the result that he completed a fine setting of Dowson's poem "Cynara".

PROF. TUGWELL TO FACE MUSIC
TO APPEAR BEFORE SENATE
PROMOTION IN OFFICE
(Special to "Telegraph")
By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic News Agency, Ordinance, 1934. Received June 11, 7.55 a.m.
Washington, June 10.
Great interest has been aroused in politico-economic circles by the announcement that Professor Rexford Tugwell is to appear before the Senate.
Mr. Tugwell has been asked to appear before the Agricultural Committee of the Senate on Monday in connection with his appointment as Under-Secretary of the Department of Agriculture.
He has hitherto occupied the position of Assistant Secretary of Agriculture and he has been much distrusted by men of conservative views, who claim that his writings and policies have shown him to be a man resolved on remaking the social order.

ONE OF BRAINS TRUST.
It was one of the five Professors appointed by President Roosevelt as his advisers who were dubbed the "Brains Trust" by the American Press. Like Professor Moley and Professor Berle he came from Columbia University.
Prof. Tugwell is meeting the Senate Committee in response to an invitation by the chairman, Senator Smith, and it is likely that he will be closely questioned regarding the trend of his policies.
The Committee has been instructed by the Senate to report on the nomination of Professor Tugwell as Under-Secretary of his Department favourably or unfavourably on Tuesday.
Professor Tugwell says he has no reason to believe that the Committee is in any way hostile to him.—United Press

PASSENGERS BEING TRANSFERRED
Salvage operations on the s.s. Changte, which ran aground in Manila Bay last week while on her way to Hongkong, have commenced, and there is every possibility of her being re-floated within a day or so.
On enquiry at the agents, Messrs. Butterfield and Swire, this morning we were informed that they had received very little information of the mishap, but able to state that the vessel had not been holed.
The passengers are proceeding to Hongkong aboard the Empress of Asia, arriving here on Wednesday.

Lipstick
brings the beauty men admire

LIKE all fastidious women, she refused to look painted. But for awhile, she made the mistake of using no lipstick... with the result that her lips were pale, old-maidish. Every woman should avoid a conspicuous painted look. Men don't like it. But now it is possible to give lips the youthful color men admire without risking a painted appearance. It is Tangee Lipstick, for Tangee contains a magic color-change principle that intensifies your natural coloring.

LOOKS ORANGE—ACTS ROSE

In the sick Tangee looks orange. But put it on and notice how it changes on your lips... takes on the one shade of rose most becoming to your coloring... the natural shade for you. Moreover, Tangee is made with a special cream base so that it soothes and softens lips while it adds to their allure. Prevents lips from drying or chapping. Also in Theatrical, a deeper shade for professional use.

UNTOUCHED—Lips left untouched are apt to have a faded look... make the face seem older.

PAINTED—Don't risk that painted look, it's menacing and men don't like it like it is.

TANGEE—Intensifies natural color, restores youthful appeal, ends that painted look.

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

At last theatregoers are coming to know Elissa Landi as she really is. Until recently Miss Landi has been presented in motion pictures as a cold, calculating, and mysterious, and her authorship of a number of serious, really important novels only served to add strength to this impression. But no less a person than Miss Landi herself denies such an accusation. "I like people!" she says. "I enjoy companionship, and I should feel very strange and very much depressed if I contemplated a life of 'solitude' from my fellow beings. Human companionship is the very essence of life and I surely want to live! And so, although she is the author of several successful novels and much fine poetry, Elissa Landi is just a decidedly 'human' girl. She is now at the King's Theatre in 'By Candlelight', co-starring with Paul Lukas in a sophisticated comedy of gay doings among the nobility of Europe, with hilarious complications brought about when a maid and a butler masquerade as their titled masters. James Whale directed, and the cast supporting Miss Landi and Lukas includes Nila Aster, Esther Kalston, Lawrence Grant, Dorothy Revier, Lois January and Warburton Gamble.

"Gambling Ship"

High tension excitement is packed into Paramount's pictorial expose of those palatial ships of high-stakes on the high-seas entitled "Gambling Ship", which opens on Wednesday at the Alhambra with a cast featuring Cary Grant, Benita Hume, Jack La Rue, Glenda Farrell and Roscoe Karns. Land-forbidden thrills are the stock in trade of these modern pirates who anchor their luxurious vessels out beyond the law and the film is a true picture of real gambling boats that exist out on the West Coast where the fast crowd wins thrills in the exciting atmosphere of the forbidden gaming table. Cary Grant plays the role of 'Ace' Corbin, a time racketeer, who leaves New York for a long vacation after his acquittal from a trumped-up murder charge, instigated by a "Business" rival, Manning, played by Jack La Rue. Paramount's especially menacing menace, "Gambling Ship" is a floating outpost of illicit thrills, a picture of action in a luxurious setting, where stakes are too high and the law too blind.

"Smoky"

No author can be considered more truly Western than Will James, whose novel, "Smoky", comes to the King's Theatre on Tuesday in the Fox Film version. He was born on a wagon trail at the edge of a creek running into the Judith Basin in Montana in 1892 while his parents were travelling from Texas with a wagon and a dozen head of horses. James' father hailed from the Lone Star state and his mother from Southern California. Both were Scotch-Irish with some Spanish blood on his mother's side. His mother died when he was a year old and three years later his father joined her. James could draw before he could read or write and he spent his childhood trapping with a French-Canadian friend of his father. He roamed up and down the West, from the Canadian border to the Mexican line, and on the far side of each, working as a hunter and cowboy. Following a series of serious injuries by "taking the rough off" of outlaw horses, he began to pay serious attention to writing and painting. When he got around to the idea of sticking to his own natural style of expression, he began to achieve fame. The story of "Smoky", a remarkable cowboy, is based on experiences in James' own life and it is estimated the novel has been read by more than five million people. Fox Film sent a unit into the heart of the Western country to film the exterior scenes with a cast headed by Victor Jory and Irene Bentley.

"Six of a Kind"

A laugh every minute is about the average for audiences at the Alhambra Theatre where Paramount's "Six of a Kind" is the feature attraction. With a featured cast of six noted comedians, the fun is fast and furious from the first minute to the final fade-out. The sextette is composed of Charlie Ruggles, Mary Boland, W.C. Fields, Alison Skipworth, George Burns and Gracie Allen the last-named two being the famous broadcasting team of Burns and Allen under the skilled direction of Joe McCreary, not a comedy-point is ever lost in the bright and refreshing story. The action of the picture takes place during a transcontinental auto journey, made by Miss Boland, Miss Allen, Ruggles and Burns, and to complicate

Over-Developed Inhibitions

By Olive Roberts Barton

Inhibitions are the policemen of character. They keep law and order in the streets of our minds and prevent natural desire and impulse from running wild. These moral guards, as they might be called, can work for ill as well as for good. In fact, when they get to a point where they over-balance normal living and throttle every natural urge and instinct, they cause trouble. To delve into adult experience for a moment, let us take a man who was brought up rigidly in a tiny prejudiced community miles away from anywhere. His people looked upon any type of pleasure or laughter as a sin and mortified the flesh by every sort of self-denial possible. Work was their god—auterly their passion and uprightness their creed. They made a religion of all the negatives of life and joy was the devil they fought.

Feeling of "Guilt"

This boy grew to manhood, we'll say, and found himself in a small city whose pleasures were a normal part of life. He became successful in business. He could never become successful with himself or be happy. His reason told him that games and sports and parties were honourable and legitimate, but his inhibitions allowed him no peace. His body attended, but his mind could not, nor his heart. A feeling of guilt pervaded his whole being whenever pleasure beckoned. He had lost all ability to play. This is the trouble with inhibitions—they do not always keep within their province. These policemen over-step their duties and not only keep order, but prevent the natural outlet of other mind-rights. The mind has rights, rights to joy and pleasure, and if it cannot break through and satisfy its normal cravings to a normal extent it turns in on itself. Unhappiness results. Technically the definition of an inhibition is "substituting one impulse for another." Morally it means "conscience keeping us straight."

But what conscience is, is a matter for discussion. The carnal cuts his enemy or even his friend with a clear conscience, but he would break every moral tenet of his tribe and of himself if he dropped his little wooden fetich in his soup, and it might even drive him to suicide.

Factor of Self-Control
If a sense of right and wrong can be developed in a child through himself it is better than to leave it all to the decalogue and the social code.

A parent can overdo the idea of self-control. There is not so much danger to-day as formerly, however, when our more rigid ancestors gloried in renunciation. Perhaps we are even swinging to the other extreme. But it is not wise to accent "guilt" sense when there is no need.

Over-developed inhibitions throttle normal conduct. They are conscience gone on a rampage, in a way.

There should be a nice balance of things to do and things not to do. If there are enough happy experiences to balance the more rigid codes a child will accept both. He will be inhibited to a healthy extent but not fanatical, or emotionally starved when he is grown.

Style of Coiffure Should Depend On Your Type

By Allela Hart

"How shall I fix my hair so that I won't look like everyone else?" One out of every five letters that come to my desk asks that question.

First of all, no smart woman should consider sacrificing a tasteful and flattering coiffure for one that is so "different" as to appear grotesque or conspicuous. Any girl likes to feel that her hair is a

THE SIMPLE COIFFURE

This simple coiffure, worn by Miss Margaret Honey, a senior at Barnard College, New York, is the easy-to-wear type of hairdress that is flattering to most women. Wide, flat waves are brushed smoothly back from the forehead, allowing the lobes of the ears to show.

trifle out of the ordinary but she must stay within the realm of the dictates of fashion and consider her hair dress from a practical viewpoint.

Let's consider what can happen to the average woman with average hair. There's no use in telling her to dress it in a fashion meant to be worn only in hair style shows. Aside from the fact that such coiffure creations are too "different" to be flattering to anyone but an exotic stage beauty, they are, generally speaking, highly impractical. They won't withstand a hat nor a strong wind nor anything else for that matter. So the simple hair styles are best for anyone who leads an active life—at least for daytime anyway.

Most women look prettier when their hair is waved softly about their faces. However, if you are lucky enough to have classic features that need no softening touches, wear your hair straight and be glad that you don't have to bother getting it waved. But, such fortunate types are few and far between. For the average, wide, loose waves, brushed back smoothly from the face are easy to keep in place and usually are most becoming.

CHAPTER XXII

Gypsy, assembling towels, soap, powder and olive oil, scolded herself, "I'm a bad mother." What a lot you needed for a baby! She had never realized it before. Quite callously she had criticized young mothers for not doing this, doing that. "Keeping up," it was generally called. And yet how could you expect them to play bridge, to read the latest books, to be bright and interesting when they faced such mountainous tasks day after day?

David was naughty that morning. Perhaps he missed the expert ministrations of the absent Mrs. Burby. Perhaps he sensed the nervousness of his young mother. At any rate he cried. He cried and cried and cried.

Gypsy was shaking with nervousness and fatigue when the ordeal of the morning bath was finished. A cold perspiration beaded her upper lip and her knees sagged as she laid the now sleepy, immaculate infant in his crib.

Could she possibly go at the rest of the disorder now? And where was Tom? He hadn't even telephoned. She was ready to cry with weakness and discouragement.

A key grated in the lock and Tom ushered in a big, blond, clean-skinned young woman wearing a long, unfashionable coat. "This is Elsa, darling," Tom announced. "She's going to do whatever you want her to."

Elsa worked part-time. Three days a week she came at eight and stayed until one. The other four days she came at one and stayed until seven, leaving dinner prepared. She was slow, tireless, clean.

After that things went more smoothly. Elsa was a treasure, Tom and Gypsy told each other. She was a jewel.

"How we can afford it I simply don't know," Gypsy would say, frowning over the bills. But there was now no question in her mind about letting Elsa go. It was simply not to be thought of, Tom said, and she agreed. Until she was stronger, at least.

The baby grew—flourished. The days rushed by, punctuated only by bath-time, nap-time, feeding-time. Sometimes the imperturbable Elsa stayed in the evening and the young Weavers dashed out to a movie. But this was not often. The budget was strained too tight to allow much entertainment.

"What did we ever do with our money before?" Gypsy wondered artlessly aloud one stormy November night when she had established herself in the big chair opposite Tom. Silk stockings and manicures, sundries and matinees and new hats—why, she had thought nothing of all these before her marriage! Now they seemed the supreme luxuries.

A wail from the bedroom interrupted her reverie. She rushed in, to find two pink hands waving above the blankets.

"Isn't he wonderful?" she marvelled. "Isn't he the most precious thing alive?" Tom said he was. Surely no other baby in the metropolis waited exactly on the dot of feeding-time, as David did. Tom held him while Gypsy warmed the bottle, testing it against her cheek as she had seen Mrs. Burby do.

He was a beautiful baby, he was beyond price. But if only he didn't waken so early in the morning. If only his demands and his needs would not multiply daily! No matter how much Elsa did there was always a full quota of tasks for David's mother. It seemed to Gypsy she was nearly always tired these nights. Almost too tired to talk to Tom, to be gay and amusing and interested. Pushing the baby's carriage over the sidewalks was a dull duty.

Gypsy laughed at herself, at her absorption, but deep down she was conscious of a pin prick of fear. Tom went out into the world every morning. He came into contact with new ideas, new people. While she—well, she was just a vegetable these days, she told herself, smiling wryly. Tom always contradicted her loyally when she said these things. But could he help seeing it? She wondered.

The McKinnon's little blue-roofed house she remembered dimly, as in a dream, envying the woman who sang now among its copper kettles and looked out at the bare branches of the orchard. Having a baby in the city had its drawbacks. Some day—some not too distant day—they must find a little place with a yard and a tree where David could grow and flourish. But what if things went on as they were now? No more money, no better prospects—what then?

Helen Marr came to call, and Blanche Jordan. They admired the baby, they brought him presents. Everyone was sweet and kind. They gave advice. They told Gypsy she must go about more—mustn't let herself get rusty. Helen asked her to lunch at the Plaza and Gypsy wriggled out of the invitation as gracefully as possible because she hadn't a new hat.

"Why didn't you go with her, sweetie?" Tom wanted to know. And Gypsy made some excuse because she wouldn't hurt him by saying she'd nothing decent to wear. Besides, no matter where she went these days she was forever flying back to the baby. Was he warm enough? Was Elsa careful? If there should be a fire... No, she would not leave him for long. Silly—it was all silly, but sometimes when she looked at him asleep his littleness and helplessness and preciousness squeezed at her heart.

She found herself weeping a good deal at this time; weeping for no reason at all, or for the slightest of reasons. She would be gulping back sobs. They would choke her throat, tears would flood her eyes. "I am a fool," she would tell herself after one of these brief storms. But she was not strong yet.

"You're much too pale and thin," her mother told her when the family came over from Blue Hills. She scolded Gypsy all afternoon—"lots of milk... beef tea... a good nap after lunch." Gypsy listened, nodded, agreed. Useless to remark that her resting times and David's did not coincide. When her back was on fire, when her eyes stung and her feet were weary, David was wide-awake, big-eyed, ready for his airing. When David slept indoors there were dozens of things to do. She had no time to cold cream her face, nor give her hair the many strokes it had been accustomed to. Her nails were short and guileless of enamel. If she sat down with a book or a day-old newspaper she soon felt herself nodding off. No, David's demands upon his young mother were prodigious. No use to tell Mrs. Morell all this. It would only worry her.

"You ought to give up this place," Gypsy's mother would say in her gentle, fretful tones, looking about her disapprovingly at the cream-coloured walls and the bright curtains. "You ought to come in with us. Bea can move back into her old room and I can fix the sewing room up for the baby."

Gypsy had heard all this a dozen times before. She was tempted—she was often tempted. The vision of herself in the big, shabby, friendly old house; of Clytie, rushing up to her with one of the oldtime breakfast trays; of a shadowy someone "taking baby off your hands"... it was all terrifically alluring. But no—aside from the fact that such an arrangement would be unfair to her parents, she felt strongly that it would be also a wound to their pride, hers and Tom's.

So she would put the generous, well-meant invitation aside with gentleness. "You know we have a lease here, Mums."

Mrs. Morell brushed this aside with characteristic lightness. "Well, break it, break it. Other people do..."

Gypsy would smile, sigh and change the subject. No, their problem could not be solved this way.

Meantime she saved, she bought cheap cuts of beef for ragouts, she contrived a delicious pudding with one egg and some scraps of bread. She taught the silent Elsa to save bits of butter and cream. She walked to the chain stores, pushing the rosy baby in his dark blue carriage, to buy the things listed in the day's advertisement as "specials."

There was nothing she did not know these days about balancing the food budget. Was this the same Gypsy who had danced far into the morning hours 18 months ago, who had spent a whole week's wages on a silly little hat with a feather? It was—and yet it was not. Gypsy's high colour was dimmed. Her laugh rose less readily to her lips. Her step was not so light. And yet there were moments—as witness New Year's eve when she wore her old red crepe with a new sheer frill—when one caught a glimpse of the old gaiety and wildness.

CHARMING BRIDE

HELENA MAY SECRETARY MARRIED

There was a pretty wedding on Saturday at the Union Church,
Kennedy Road, the bride being Miss Dorothy Wilson Westland, only child of the late Mr. G. G.
Westland and Mrs. Westland of Kandy, Ceylon, and the bridegroom, Mr. Arthur Charles Lamb-Gasper, son of the late Mr. C. A.
Lamb-Gasper and Mrs. Lamb-Gasper, of Kensington, London.
The Rev. E. G. Powell officiated at the ceremony, while appropriate music was rendered on the organ
by Mr. G. E. Longyear.

Yellow chrysanthemums and white gladioli, used for decorating the Church, were beautifully with the beige and yellow colour scheme of the bride's group.

The bride, who was given away by the Hon. Sir Thomas Southern, K.C., C.M.G., looked charming in a rose beige Peau d'Ange lace gown set off with a smart little rose beige toque and shoulder length veil of silk tulle in a toning shade. She wore long white kid gloves and a shoulder spray of blue rose gladioli. She carried no flowers. The wedding gown was a "Eunice" creation.

Flocks of primrose orrandle with hats to match were worn by the Maids of Honour, the Misses Kathleen Markham, niece of Mr. and Mrs. P. B.
Jolly, Commissioner of Customs, Holloway, and Marie Paterson of Queen's College. They carried bunches of orange and primrose gladioli.

Mrs. E. D. C. Wolfe, M.B.E., acted as Matron of Honour. The duties of best man were undertaken by Commander J. B. Morpeth of the Chinese Maritime Customs.

Many Friends Present.
Many friends of the bride and bridegroom were present at the ceremony, among them being Lady
Southern, Mrs. O. C. Borrett, Mrs. R.

ARMED ROBBERY

BRITISH ACCOUNTANTS
LOSE $12,000.

Shanghai, May 9.
A British firm, Messrs. Seth, Mancell and McLure, leading chartered accountants in Shanghai, were victims of an unusually daring armed robbery this afternoon.

About 4.30 p.m., just after the return of two shroffs from collecting four armed Chinese entered the offices and held up everybody at pistol-point, including Mr.
McLure himself.

The gunmen shepherd all the staff upstairs to a small room where they were locked in, and then made off with $12,000 in cash.
No arrests have yet been made.
—Reuter.

E. Lindell, The Hon. Mr. E. D. C.
Wolfe, C.M.G., Mrs. Wolfe and Miss Wolfe, The Hon. Dr. A. B. Wellington, C.M.G., M.B.E., and Mrs.
Wellington, Mesdames R. E. Lindell,
J. A. Fraser, E. Cock, C. E. L. Grist,
O. C. Womack, J. Durrant, A. M.
Bowen-Smith, G. D. T. Black, S.
Thomson, C. L. Farmer, J. G. Meyer,
E. G. Powell, W. Robertson and R. K.
Wallace.

Others present were Mr. E. N. En-sor, Commissioner of the Chinese Maritime Customs, Mr. and Mrs. D.
Trail, Mr. and Mrs. G. Cock, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Angus, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Smith, Mr. Peter Jackson, Mrs.
Briggs, Mrs. J. D. Lloyd, Mrs. Collison and Mrs. E. Davidson.

After the ceremony, a luncheon reception was held at No. 1 St. John's Place, Garden Road, and later, the happy couple left for their honeymoon which is being spent at Cheung Chau.
For her going-away dress, Mrs.
Lamb-Gasper chose ivory cotton tweed trimmed with nature blue.
This ensemble was also a "Eunice" creation.

DROUGHT RELIEF

ROOSEVELT'S MESSAGE TO CONGRESS

Washington, June 10.
President Roosevelt sent a Message to Congress yesterday recommending the expenditure of $250,000,000 on a drought relief programme.

The programme provides for the relief of human suffering, the purchase of livestock for distribution among the needy, loans for farmers to buy feed and to buy sub-marginal land.

It is also planned to place destitute farm families on new locations, establish work camps, provide employment in the drought area and purchase seed for 1935 planting.—United Press.

TERRORISM

ANOTHER PROBLEM FOR
DR. DOLFFUSS

Vienna, June 10.

Numerous terrorist acts are reported from all parts of Austria.

A Heimwehr detachment, guarding the railway tunnel at Lueg was fired on from the mountains.
One soldier was killed and one seriously injured.

A viaduct was blown up at Sem-mering, delaying trains from Italy.
The railway line was also blown up at Kremus, presumably in order to interfere with the tour of members of the diplomatic corps, as guests of the Government.

The Danube steamer station at Mussdorf was blown up and a number of bomb explosions are reported from other parts of the country.—Reuter.

A SIMPLE CALCULATION

The joint paid circulations of the South China Morning Post and The Hongkong Telegraph average approximately—

9,000 COPIES PER DAY

This means that your advertising message enters nine thousand homes and is read by probably three times that number of people daily.

If you endeavour to reach these readers by any other means, such as circular letters, how much extra does it cost you?

Here is a simple calculation based on a reasonable estimate of the work involved:—

9,000 Circular letters	@ $7 per thou:	$ 63.00
9,000 Envelopes	@ $4 " "	$ 36.00
9,000 Postage Stamps	@ 2 cents each	$180.00
Labour and incidental expenses (approx.)		$ 21.00
Total		$300.00

AN ADVERTISEMENT OCCUPYING 6 3/4" by 10" (approximately the size of a circular letter) published in both the
S. C. M. Post and The Hongkong Telegraph—

COSTS ONLY $36.00

(Based on an Annual Contract of 500" @ 60 cents).

You know what happens to circulars and you know what happens to newspapers when they enter the home or office.
The former may fall into the waste-paper basket. THE LATTER ARE ALWAYS READ!

In other words, by placing your message before the newspaper-reading public, your $300 will give you nearly

75,000 MESSAGES
INSTEAD OF 9,000

Circulations certified by Messrs. Lowe, Bingham &
Matthews, Chartered Accountants.

THE FUTURE OF THE BATTLESHIP

"Battleships are the backbone of the United States Navy," declared Mr. Swanson, the U. S. Navy Secretary, last week. This statement indicates that a good deal is likely to be heard at next year's Naval Conference regarding this type of warship. Battleships have been ignored at naval parleys ever since the historic Washington Conference of 1921, with one or two exceptions none having been launched since then. Naval competition of the past decade has been in cruisers and auxiliary craft. At the back of the differences between the Powers over the future of the battleship, strategic considerations play an important point. But the chief factor is the inability of naval experts to agree on what role the battleship will play in future naval warfare. The evolution of these gigantic fighting ships is interesting. Originally the battleship was simply a grown-up cruiser. The old-time "line of battle ship" of sailing days had three gun decks where the frigate, or cruiser, had but one. She presented her battery in three tiers; otherwise, she was just like the smaller craft. The evolution of the revolving turret, led to a new kind of battleship, one which had a strong secondary battery arranged in a broadside, and a big-gun battery of four guns, mounted in pairs in turrets. Then came the dreadnaught type, in which four or six turrets were mounted on a line amidships, capable of being fired on either broadside, and the secondary battery was reduced to unimportance. It was then that the battleship really began to grow. Hulls were made larger and larger, armour plate was made heavier and heavier, the big guns were made more and more powerful; and now we seem to have reached the limit of useful size, so that some experts doubt if the huge battleship is really worth what it costs. A large-scale naval war would no doubt settle the relative value of the different types of fighting ships, but it is to be hoped that the argument will never be settled in this way. So long as the argument is merely an academic one as between naval experts, nobody need worry greatly about the issue.

NOTES OF THE DAY

FUTILITY OF ARMAMENT

French newspapers are now worried by reports that Germany is constructing a chain of bases along the frontier, ready to shower a vast number of explosive rockets all over France. One newspaper says that projectiles capable of travelling 125 miles have been developed, and it is estimated that with a large chain of rocket bases Germany could dump 50,000 tons of high explosives on French soil in one night. The French frontier forts may be invulnerable; but what, asks a Paris paper, is the use of them, if France may be dead and burned behind them? One might go farther. What is the use of preparing for war at all, if weapons against which there is no defence can be used against you? Or, for that matter, why try to keep civilization alive, if we are all preparing to blow it out of existence overnight?

I.L.O. IN SESSION

The International Labour Conference of the League of Nations is again in session. From fifty different countries have come representatives of governments, workers and employers to deal with working conditions throughout the world. As usual, the Director of the International Labour Office at Geneva (Mr. Harold Butler) has prepared an annual report which places the events of the last year in perspective. It reads like a report by the Economic Section of the League. But then, in these days when economics so frequently trespass on the ground of politics, all more do economics and the problems of industry overlap. Mr. Butler makes the point that effective action cannot come from either industry, finance or governmental intervention alone. What is needed is joint action with all three factors working together.

ECONOMIC NATIONALISM

Economic nationalism, of which there has been such a striking recrudescence in recent years, he condemns as extremely dangerous. Apart from its effect upon trade and industry, it is bound to influence political relations between States. A minor tariff wrangle, he points out, may develop into a major political question, producing a new source of apprehension in an already distracted world. A strong lead is needed towards a more rational organisation of the world's economic life. The remedy is not obviously in the hands of the International Labour Organisation. Nevertheless the influence of the Organisation and the value of its conventions must not be underestimated.

WAR DEBTS—A SALVAGE JOB

What can be salvaged out of the war debt wreckage? Can the United States collect anything more from debtors gratuitously affronted by the Johnson Act? Can Britain, France, Italy and all the other debtors save themselves from final classification as reprobates of their obligations? Above all, can the nations rescue any scraps of mutual good will, so shredded by constant bickering? These things are worth saving. And it would seem that fifteen years' experience with wrong methods might have brought the governments to some willingness to try another way. For both debtor and creditor peoples the choice is clear. They must choose between some salvage and total loss. They must decide whether they want to avoid default or justify it to themselves. They can either reach a settlement or make beautiful explanations of their inability to settle. Will they make a last effort or will they continue to indulge their fancy for futile recriminations?

THE OTHER VIEWPOINT

The world cannot be concerned now with naturalness or the justification of grievances. The question is: What can be salvaged? If it would have done any good to continue gesturing with ten per cent. payments, the creditor and the debtors might have endeavoured to find a way around the Johnson Act. But any such effort would merely be a staving off of the necessity for a real settlement. Anything that can be salvaged should be welcomed. Especially if in the salvaging process the nations show that they have gained some appreciation of the fact that justification of one's self and condemnation of others do not make for satisfactory relations. Consideration of the honest viewpoint of the other side, is an essential in diplomacy as in managing children. If the nations can even glimpse that fact, they will salvage something from the war debt wreckage.

THE MAD RUSH OF HISTORY

By WALTER CREIGHTON

ANYBODY who undertakes the production of a great national spectacle such as the Pageant of Parliament becomes open to a good deal of criticism. For the story of Parliament is the story of England, and that can never be sufficiently portrayed in a spectacle lasting some three hours.

Fortunately Sir Courtenay Ilbert, late Clerk of the House of Commons, in his "Short History of Parliament," divided this story into four great periods—"the period of the medieval Parliament, of which the first Great Parliament summoned by Edward I. became the model and type; the period of the Tudors and Stuarts, having for its central portion the time of conflict between King and Parliament, between prerogative and privilege; the period between the Revolution of 1688 and the Reform Act of 1832; and the modern period that began in 1832."

With these four periods as the outstanding theme in the book of the Pageant, it then became a question of elimination.

The broad outline of these four periods could be filled in by a multitude of incidents illustrating events that stirred the soul of England. But there is such a mass of material, and so little time for the portrayal of scenes that illustrate a period covering some seven hundred years, that a great deal had to be left out in order to make room for outstanding events in the development of Constitutional Government. In some instances, as much as seventy years has been passed over in order to keep pace with the mad rush of history.

Great Parliamentary personalities had to fade before great Parliamentary happenings, and dramatic licence had to overwhelm historical timing, without outraging the broader lines of accuracy. Strict attention to detail is of no avail in the Royal Albert Hall, which demands broad outline, brilliant splashes of colour, stirring movement, and, above all, speech in drama. Outstanding scenes illustrating the four great Parliamentary periods had to be joined up by intimate scenes in the lives of Kings and subjects, sometimes to form a link in historical sequence, but more often to bring relief in the narrative by glimpses of beauty in the traditions, arts, and literature of the day.

As it is the object of the Pageant to show how personal liberty depends upon a representative form of government, the first great picture obviously had to illustrate how the united will of the clergy, barons, and people forced King John to safeguard their rights by signing Magna Carta. Then, because of his recognition of these rights, Edward I. summons the first Great Parliament, on which all future Parliaments are to be modelled. By his pronouncement to his assembled subjects, "What touches all should have the consent of all," he acknowledges that balance between the will of the Sovereign and the will of the people must always be the foundation of Constitutional Government.

King Edward had learnt that, without the people's consent, it was becoming impossible for him to raise money for the wars which at that time were regarded as proof of successful kingship. The people in turn were rapidly learning that they were in a position to bargain with their Sovereign for security, which every citizen realised was the only sure way of obtaining prosperity. It was this political game of give and take, at first begun so crudely, that later grew into the intricate political machinery which we know to-day. Then we see this ingenious political apple-cart disastrously upset as England becomes the tilting ground for the Wars of the Roses—the result of a brawl between two proud lords, whose power had grown greater than the authority of the Sovereign. During the following years of chaos the people went on quietly with their daily tasks, bored by the continual warfare between the Houses of York and Lancaster.

Thus it was only when the House of Tudor came to the throne that the balance between King and people was again brought into play. But this balance was quickly over-weighted on the side of Monarchy, owing to the mental astuteness and ability of the Tudors. They realised what an admirable instrument for their schemes could be made of a Parliament weakened in its Upper House through the slaughter of the Wars of the Roses, and ineffective in the Lower House through lack of experience.

Parliament soon began to realise that, as a result of voyages of discovery, in which English sailors and adventurers led the way, England was beginning to have a great influence upon the world. By degrees it learnt its power, and presumed to advise and even to withstand the will of the Sovereign. So we see Elizabeth enraged at the impertinence of her Ministers, who dared to dictate to her about marriage and the succession to the throne. Finally, through her great love for her people, her political genius, and the supreme intuition of her woman's wit, she realised that to have governed with the affection and approval of her people was the richest jewel in her crown.

Queen Elizabeth stands out in history, a brilliant example of how this overbalancing in the scale of Sovereign and people could successfully triumph through an astuteness that continually recognised the real importance of the people, and could rule them through this loving recognition. This wonderful relationship between Elizabeth and her subjects must be one of the outstanding features—of any pageant dealing with Constitutional history.

Next we see the perils which come from forcefully overweighing this balance evidenced by the tragedy of Charles I., who clung to Royal prerogative in his disastrous fight against the rights of Parliamentary privilege. The ensuing failure of despotism as practised by Cromwell is another example of the folly of attempting to dismiss Parliament.

Later we see Parliament organising itself on stronger lines so that, after years of muddle and disaster, it can take matters into its own hands. (Continued on Page 7.)

The Very Idea!

NEW SERIAL STARTS

By George

THE woman who has sued for restitution of conjugal rights because her husband never smiled at her and never tried to bring a smile to her face, seemed to think that marriage is a laughing matter.

After all when they married the joke was on him but you can't keep a joke fresh for a life time. Of course it may be that he has not seen the point yet but that should be soon remedied if his wife succeeds in her application.

Applications for separation are getting more and more technical and women have to be very original to keep up with the fashions.

The woman who sued for separation on the grounds of mental cruelty alleging that her husband used to point at her with his toothpick everytime she began a dish, has been outlasted by another who said her husband alienated her canary's affections and taught it to spit orange pips at her.

There was also a case of physical cruelty where the husband used to make his wife share his whoopee parties and drink as much Epsom Salts as he drank of Scotch.

But the scale is gradually turning the other way, as witness the Hebrew who had his wife bound over not to thrash him for a year.

OUR NOVELETTE

THE GOLDEN CANDAREEN

by

Dorothy Gonzalez van Basto
 Figueredo Wassumul
 Contributed.

It was eventide at Hongkong. Far away from the Lyemoon Pass came a subdued murmur from the Mangrove swamps. It was the noise of myriad snipe and teal as they laid their eggs with a plop into the silvery but odiferous mud. In the nullahs coolies could be heard engaged in their evening ablutions while from far up in the hills came the harsh grunts of the meekie bird as she caught the elusive fireflies one by one, and extinguished their luminous armatures.

Clad in white duck and seated on the verandah of her tiny bungalow was Madge Lestrang. The deep lines on her face, her swarthy complexion and her rugged eyebrows told of long residence in tropical climes.

Carelessly she tossed her hair-smoked hair do Perfection cheroft into the Casala plantation where it was later, in the evening discovered and enjoyed by a chair-boy. With a fierce Chinese oath she instructed the amah to bring out the fan-tan table and for lack of something better to do, won $45 from the trusty slave in a few minutes.

Yes, Madge was a true daughter of the East, more to be pitied than envied. Her father was a successful tea-taster at Canton, but of later years had developed a liking for samshu. Madge was now the only sane member of the queerly assorted couple and they lived in this small bungalow rented from the English Trading Investment Co., Ltd., a Chinese concern managed by Greek, Parsee and Kowloon residents.

But it is with the son of the chairman of directors that we are concerned. Pale and delicate, noble and beautiful in character and feature, Reginald Hipocoon de Jeejeebhoy, d.v., was despite his name, every inch a man.

(What is Jeejeebhoy going to do in this first instalment of a thrilling narrative? We don't know yet, but we will think of something for to-morrow. Do you think we should kill him off in the first chapter and replace him with a sharabroker or a reporter? Perhaps we never ought to have brought him into this story but it's too late now and we will muck out of it somehow. In the meantime look out for to-morrow and see if the amah caught Missie cheating while Jeejeebhoy, d.v., also saw her in the mirror of his little powder box.)

"Of course she can afford to dress better than the rest of us. Her husband never bats under 350."

THE BLIND COMPOSER DEAD

Yorkshire, in January, 1863. His family was of German origin. He was educated at Bradford Grammar School and the London International College, Isleworth.

PLANTER IN FLORIDA.

It was intended that he should go in for business but he soon abandoned the idea and went in 1884 as a planter to Florida where he devoted his spare time to musical study. After 2 years he returned to Europe and worked under Judasohn and Reinecke at the Leipzig Conservatorium from 1886 to 1888, but he probably learnt more from Grieg, who was then studying the art of scoring for a modern orchestra there. Darius afterwards took up his abode in France, spending 8 years in Paris which he forsook for Grez-sur-Loing in the Forest of Fontainebleau. This has been his home ever since, though he has travelled in many lands.

He was in Norway in 1897 when his incidental music to Heiberg's play "Folkemødet" was produced and his satirical use of the national anthem caused a sensation. In 1899 he gave a concert of his compositions in London. His fantasia-overture "Over the Hills and Far Away" was given in 1893 at Elberfeld where his first opera "Koenig" was produced in 1896. His second opera "A Village Romeo and Juliet" was first performed at the Komische Oper in Berlin in 1907 and was produced by Sir F. Beecham at Covent Garden in 1910. A third opera "Fennimore and Gerda" was staged at Frankfurt soon after the armistice.

NOTABLE WORKS.

His piano concerto in C Minor "A Mass of Life" for soli chorus and orchestra after Nietzsche's "Zarathustra" are among most notable works. Others include: "Life's Dance" a symphonic poem, "Poem of Life and Love," "Eventyr," "Song of Great City," "Appalachia" tone poem for orchestra and final chorus, "Brigg Fair" an English rhapsody, "The High Hills" for orchestra and chorus, "North Country Sketches" violin and cello concertos, a double concerto for violin and cello, "Legend" for violin and orchestra, "Sea Drift" for baritone, chorus and orchestra; "Arabesque" for baritone, soprano, chorus and orchestra and a cello sonata. He has also written the music dramas "Ivanhoe" and "The Magic Fountain," the fine incidental music to Elory Flecker's play "Hassan" and a number of songs. He married Jelke Rosen, a painter. —Reuter Special.

MARCUS SHOW

BIG HIT MADE AT OPENING

The Marcus Show, which opened its Hongkong season at the Queen's Theatre yesterday, more than fulfilled expectations. It can be described as the most attractive and colourful show ever produced in the Colony.

Magnificently dressed and strikingly produced, with an abundance of bright and novel scenes, the show is noteworthy for the variety of the fare offered and for the amazingly rapid manner in which change succeeds change. There is never a dull moment from start to finish.

A lengthier notice will appear in our final edition.

TUBERCULOSIS

MORTALITY DECREASES IN ENGLAND.

London, June 9. The report of the Council of the National Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis shows that within the twenty years since the national scheme based on the recommendations of the Department's Committee on tuberculosis has been in operation, mortality in England from all forms of tuberculosis has fallen by approximately 41 percent. The death rate from tuberculosis in 1933 was the lowest ever recorded and shows a substantial reduction over that of 1913.

The report states that facts justify the expectation that with wider and fuller realisation of the purpose of the national tuberculosis scheme, final triumph is assured. —British Wireless.

The Health Bulletin of Eastern ports for the week ended June 2 shows the following cases in infectious diseases: Plague: Baghdad 1 case, Rangoon 1 case, Phnom-Penh 1 death, Calcutta 105 cases, Small-pox: Bombay 3 cases, Calcutta 17 cases, Ceylon 1 case, Karachi 3 cases, Madras 8 cases, Negapatnam 4 cases, Rangoon 1 case, Vizagapatnam 3 cases, Tournon 3 cases, Shanghai 0 cases, Typhus, Alexandria 2 cases.

SCIENTIFIC RE-SEARCH

Australia To Contribute To British Institutions

The Australian Government is to contribute financially towards the maintenance of certain institutions in England engaged in research work of significance to Australia.

The Minister in Charge of Development (Senator McLachlan) says that a determined effort is being made to sustain the major lines of team work which the Empire Marketing Board supported when it was in existence.

Senator McLachlan, said the Marketing Board had stimulated Empire work in many directions, including horticulture, entomology, food preservation and transport and forest products and pastures. The passing of the board created a serious situation only to be met by concerted action on the part of the various sections of the Empire. The British Government had generously undertaken responsibility for maintaining several of the research stations concerned, but had invited the Dominions and the colonial Empire to assist in supporting others, and this invitation had been accepted by Australia. The Commonwealth's contribution was £4,600 a year.

More than 200 dancers took advantage of the 1 a.m. extension at the Repulse Bay Hotel on Saturday night and the time passed all too quickly to the accompaniment of the "Andentians" high-class dance music. These melody-makers under the baton of their leader, Andre, are, according to popular acclaim, by far the best dance band in the Colony. Many of the younger set decided not to call it a night at 1 a.m. and when the dancing was finished, quite a number changed to bathing costumes and adjourned to the beach for a swimming party. It was a pleasing sight to see so many prominent professional and commercial people of the Colony present, and, also, to note that Repulse Bay is again the Saturday night rendezvous for Hongkong Society.

There was a clean bill of health in the Colony on Friday.

NAVY STOKER PACIFIST

CHANGED VIEWS AND COURT MARTIAL

How a Naval stoker's changed outlook on life led to him striking an officer was told at a court martial at Portsmouth.

Alexander Rosdewitz, the man in question, of H.M.S. Curacoa, was sentenced to four months' detention and ordered to forfeit nine days' pay for overstaying leave twice and for striking Lieut. Commander J. W. Forrest, a Rugby international. He had pleaded guilty.

A statement submitted on his behalf ran:

"When I joined the Service in November, 1929, I had every intention of serving my country to the best of my ability as a stoker.

"During the last two years, however, a great change in my outlook on life has come about, so that I cannot now understand how any sane man or woman could wish for the destruction of any pretext of a fellow human being.

"It is now, therefore, most distasteful to me being employed by an organisation whose whole object in the event of war is the destruction of human life for its own benefit.

"This wanton destruction now appears to me as greed, for I cannot even regard a single person as my enemy, let alone a whole nation.

"My subconscious mind took refuge in this action of striking to satisfy my acute mental conflict.

"For financial reasons it has not been possible for me to purchase my discharge so I have made every effort to repress my feelings and carry on to the best of my ability. As the result of this repression in my conscious thoughts my subconscious feelings have increased a thousand fold, rendering it more and more difficult for me to carry on in the face of the requirements imposed by Naval discipline."

CLERGY INVESTMENT IN ARMAMENTS

PENSIONS BOARD PROBLEM

SHOULD the Clergy Pensions Institution sell their holding of £10,000 Preference stock in Vickers, Ltd., on the ground that it is incompatible with Christian principles to possess armament shares?

The Clergy Pensions Board, which controls the Institution, is expected to answer this question at a meeting shortly.

"I cannot anticipate the Board's decision," an official said, "but I know some members feel strongly about the position.

"It has to be remembered, of course, that the shares were bought about 40 years ago—long before the war.

A DIFFERENT OUTLOOK.

"The Institution was more like an ordinary commercial insurance company then, and there was a different outlook upon our armament firms. Everybody felt they were part of the defence of the country.

"There is now a totally different feeling. A new position has arisen since the revolutions of Miss Eleanor Rathbone, M.P., at Vickers' meeting, about the firm advertising their armaments in Germany.

"The Board took over the Institution in 1926, and became responsible for its investments, assets and liabilities.

"In any case we cannot buy any more Vickers shares, for the Board is bound to buy trustee stock, and Vickers shares are not trustee stock."

CHINESE WEDDING.

GLOUCESTER SCENE OF PRETTY CEREMONY

A pretty Chinese wedding took place on Saturday afternoon in the Gloucester Restaurant, when Miss H. Lee, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Y. B. Lee of Hongkong, became the bride of Mr. C. S. Kwok, of the Hongkong Chun-Shing Commercial Academy, and eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Kwok.

In the absence of Mr. Chan Lim-pak, J.P., who was unable to be present owing to pressure of business, Mr. Kwok Chan, his son-in-law, officiated.

The bride, who was given away by her father, Mr. Y. B. Lee, was dressed in a European bridal dress of white satin, with a lace-trimmed veil clasped with a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of lilies and maiden-hair fern.

The only bridesmaid, Miss May Tsui, wore a Chinese costume of apple-green georgette, and carried a bouquet of lilies and maiden-hair fern.

After the ceremony, which was attended by about 200 guests, a reception was given in the Gloucester Restaurant, which was tastefully decorated for the occasion with baskets of lilies, and streamers of orange-blossoms and leaves.

The happy couple will depart this week for their honeymoon in Shanghai.

LESSON SERMON.

FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST SCIENTIST, HONGKONG

"God the Only Cause and Creator" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, yesterday.

The Golden Text was: "Blessed be the Lord God, the God of Israel, who only doeth wondrous things" (Psalms 72: 18).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, whose hope is in the Lord his God: Which made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that therein is: which keepeth truth for ever: The Lord openeth the eyes of the blind: the Lord raiseth them that are bowed down: the Lord loveth the righteous: He healeth the broken in heart, and bindeth up their wounds" (Psalms 146: 5, 6, 7, 147: 3).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Does God send sickness, giving the mother her child for the brief space of a few years and then taking it away by death? Instead of God sending sickness and death, He destroys them, and brings to light immortality. . . . God does not cause man to sin, to be sick, or to die" (p.206).

TRANSJORDANIA

AMIR ABDULLAH PAYS VISIT TO LONDON

London, June 9. A picturesque figure in the dress of his country, the Amir Abdullah of Transjordan arrived in London to-day on his first visit to Britain.

The Amir, who is staying three weeks as the guest of the British Government said he was paying purely a courtesy visit. There was no political or financial significance attached to it.

He added that Transjordan was making great strides. The country was free from frontier trouble and living in cordial relationship with Palestine, Syria, Iraq and the Hedjaz. —Reuter Special.

hands and offer the Crown to William and Mary. So began another great epoch in the history of Constitutional Government, a period which saw the rise of the authority of the Prime Minister and his Cabinet.

But in less than a hundred and fifty years the people realised that Parliament, through whose support the Prime Minister and Cabinet ruled by the authority of the Crown, was in no way representative, and insisted on reforms so that their right of a voice in the government of the country should be real and valid. The Reform Bill was passed, and with it began the modern period of Parliament's history in which we are living to-day.

It is an enthralling story, this story of Parliament and the people, and it can be told only through broad impressions of great movements and happenings. Two great pointers must necessarily stand out—our destiny as a nation and the development of Constitutional Government. The Great War—the most terrible conflict in the history of nations—and the granting of the vote to women are inevitable landmarks. The exigencies of time make it necessary for the romance to ignore even the romantic story of the British Empire (a huge pageant in itself), and also those tremendous personalities, Disraeli and Gladstone.

We have not attempted to create a comprehensive picture gallery of Parliament. It has been our aim to provide a bold poster display which will convey a lasting impression on the minds of the spectators.

TRENT BRIDGE'S SECOND HIGHEST TEST SCORE

LEAGUE TENNIS: WEEK'S BEST ATTRACTIONS

CHIPPERFIELD'S DISTINCTION

FARNES ANOTHER MAURICE TATE

TEST "SHORTS"

ENGLAND continue the Test match to-day at Trent Bridge, 246 runs in arrears with six wickets outstanding—hardly a position from which they can expect to win.

AUSTRALIA have a reasonable chance of earning this distinction; it practically depends on the pre-lunch play. If this goes in favour of the Australians, and they can obtain a lead of some 100 odd runs, they need only to score fairly rapidly to place England in a very precarious position.

AUSTRALIA'S first innings total of 374 was interesting from more angle than one. Apart from the fact that it illustrated a very fine recovery, it is the second highest score ever to be made in a Test at Trent Bridge.

THE biggest total to date is 426 for 6 wickets compiled by England in 1895. This allowed the home country to win by 213 runs. In 1930, when England won by 93 runs, Australia hit up 236 in their last innings and England 302 in their second knock on the same ground.

ALTHOUGH Chipperfield lost the distinction of being one of eight Australians to score a century in his first Test, he has probably established the record of being the first batsman to miss the honour by one run. Australians who topped the three-figure mark in their initial appearances are: C. Bannerman at Melbourne in 1876-7 (165 not out), H. L. Collins at Sydney, 1920-1, (104), R. A. Duff at Melbourne in 1901-2 (104), R. Graham at Lord's 1893 (107), R. J. Hartigan at Adelaide in 1907-8 (116), A. A. Jackson at Adelaide

Shanghai Tennis Championship

DRAW FOR MIXED DOUBLES

Kho Hooi-hye, Shanghai champion is partnered by Mrs. L. Meadmore, non-playing captain of the Shanghai Ladies Interclub team in 1931, in the Shanghai Mixed Doubles championship which starts this month. They have received a bye into the second round.

John L. Wade, veteran Intercluber is teaming up with Mrs. Burton, and former Miss "Billy" Firth, another Intercluber, is partnering her husband, R. Krenov. They meet H. Colloco and his sister, Miss Colloco, who played for Shanghai against Hongkong in 1929 and 1931.

The full draw is as follows: Kho Hooi-hye and Mrs. Meadmore, M. Bonavitch and Mrs. E. Ward, byes, L. J. Coulcher and Mrs. Taylor v. J. L. Wade and Mrs. Burton; L. F. Stokes and Mrs. Schneider v. Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Moir; A. G. Meliso and Mrs. Fischer v. J. G. Forbes and Mrs. Gate; Mr. and Mrs. B. Krenov v.

In 1928-9 (164), and W. H. Ponsford at Sydney in 1924-5 (110).

CHIPPERFIELD followed up his batting achievement by some-thing equally as valuable to Australia, when he brilliantly caught Sutcliffe just at a time when the Yorkshireman was settling down to a typical century. Chipperfield held a hard cut through the slips with one hand as the ball was going away.

THE dismissal of Sutcliffe just at the time he was batting so confidently obviously had its repercussions on the succeeding batsmen. Neither Hammond nor Leyland shaped confidently after this disaster, and Hammond was out to an appalling stroke for a first class cricketer. Leyland's batting was "nervy."

GRIMMETT sustained the general opinion of the London critics that he is still the best spin bowler in the world by capturing the wickets of Sutcliffe, Walters and Leyland. It was a fiendishly cunning ball which beat Walters, the amateur being completely deceived by Grimmett's action and the pitch of the ball.

KENNETH Farnes' figures scarcely pay tribute to the splendid work he did with the ball in his very first outing as a Test cricketer. Expressed in cold figures he bowled four balls short of 41 overs, ten of which were maidens, and took five wickets for 102 runs. For a fast bowler these are extraordinary fine figures and recall the lion-hearted performances of Maurice Tate in Australia in 1924-5.

LESLIE Ames' wicketkeeping was apparently excellent. In addition to dismissing Ponsford and Chipperfield, two of the most important wickets, there were only ten extras in a total of 374. English supporters will be hoping that he will reveal his true value to-day when he goes to the crease.

HERE is a comparison in the fall of the wickets. Australia:—1 for 77; 2 for 88; 3 for 125; 4 for 146. England:—1 for 45; 2 for 102; 3 for 106; 4 for 114.

FAMOUS FOOTBALLERS TO RETIRE

Osler And de Villiers Leaving S. A. Rugby

Capetown, June 4. Pierre de Villiers and Bennie Osler, South Africa's famous pair of half-backs, will be out of the Rugby football game this season. It is something of a coincidence that the same season should mark the retirement from the game of these partners in five Test matches (three in 1928, one in 1931-32, and one last year), and countless Currie Cup encounters and trial games since 1925. De Villiers, who has rendered yeoman service to the Paarl club for 10 years and been its captain for seven, in some years younger than Osler, but his active career has been a long, as well as a brilliant one.

H. Colloco and Miss Clara Colloco, J. H. Pott and Miss Nichols, V. G. Taussig and Mrs. Ovadia, byes. The first round is to be completed by June 15, the second by June 19, the semi-finals will be played on the Association court on June 23 or 24, and the date of the final will be announced later.

SWIMMERS KEEN ABOUT EMPIRE GAMES

CHANCE FOR JUNIORS WHO DO NOT ATTEMPT TOO MUCH

The announcement that three English nominations will probably be made for each of the individual swimming events at the Empire Games in London in August, will be warmly welcomed on all sides. It means that we may expect many new names to appear among the entrants for the trials next month, and the result may be that some swimmers of the rising generation, who do not consider themselves speedy enough to hold their own against a reigning champion, will find they are faster than they thought, and gain added confidence in their powers.

The action of the Southern Counties Executive in recommending Pitfield-street Baths as the venue for the Empire Southern Area Trials, and the installing of roped lanes, will meet, I believe, with the unanimous approval of all the trial candidates. writes W. J. Howcroft in the Morning Post. The Hoxton Bath is exceptionally wide, giving a reasonably smooth surface, even when a field of six are competing.

In addition, the lanes will be a great aid to competitors in the 440 and 1,600 yards tests, as there are few swimmers who can keep a dead-straight course throughout a long swim. I estimate that roped lanes will be worth 10sec. or more in a 1,600 yards' swim, and I shall not be surprised if other districts follow the example set in London.

The report of the Southern Executive meeting commenting on the poor response made by Southern swimmers at the preliminary trials may give the impression that there is a lack of interest in the Empire Games. Actually the poor support given to the trials shows that clubs and swimmers are not apathetic, but the reverse.

Last November many clubs, in reply to a request from the Coaching Committee, forwarded the names and particulars of swimmers who could be considered as potential candidates for the Empire Games this year and the Olympic Games in 1936. Then just before Christmas a circular was sent to the swimmers named giving a few days notice of trials to be held and asking which event the candidate desired to enter.

The majority of these candidates were under 16 years of age, without any experience of trial procedure, and many of them too inexperienced to know their best distances. The result was that club officials had to be hurriedly consulted. One club coach was called upon to give advice to twenty or more juniors who were not in a condition to race at such short notice.

It would, I think, have been more satisfactory if those responsible for the nominations had been consulted, and the circular filled by them, especially as club officials generally were not convinced that the trials were of any great use.

CLUBS AND THEIR STARS. Club officials also view with concern a recent development which calls for appearance from front-rank swimmers at week-end fixtures on the coast. It is not equitable that members who have been released from club engagements to enable them to take part in the trials for the Empire Games should turn out for other organisations.

The swimmers in question are often young and inexperienced, and they naturally look on these holiday trips with favour. In my own case, hardly a day passes without one or more of my pupils being invited to make an appearance involving a long journey and a hard race.

In a way it is a compliment for a comparatively unknown man to be invited to appear outside his own area, or against a foreign crack, but experience shows that these outside trips do more harm than good. This season my advice has been to refuse all extra engagements "until after the Empire Trials, and I am confident that those who do so will profit by it."

Many promising juniors are bewildered by contradictory advice from well-intentioned outsiders. On

Hongkong Cycling Club

YESTERDAY'S ADVENTUROUS TRIP THROUGH THE TERRITORIES

The Hongkong Cycling Club's run yesterday fully came up to expectation in so far as enjoyment was concerned, though the poor state of the paths and tracks explored succeeded in keeping the zest for high mileages in check. It was 8.30 a.m. when Mr. H. A. G. Keates led the party from the Ferry by way of Matakouk and Kowloon Old City, passing Ngau Shewan with its "Home for the Aged" on the route to Customs Pass. No member wishing to enter the Home, the Club reached the head of the Pass after a hard climb intact in numbers. Here the right hand fork was taken and some delightfully unimproved views of the Island, Harbour, Kowloon and the Lion Rock with its neighbouring hills were enjoyed from the heights of Anderson Road (old in 1913).

Ye followers, however, Anderson Road is but a name, and regular nimble wits and a supple body to circumvent the traps of Nature along this wild track. Throughout its entire length one finds a wall of soil or rock to the left whilst on the right the ground falls sheer with a drop the ground falls sheer with a drop varying from a few feet to several yards. The beauties of waterfalls and silent pools have already been enlarged upon; their charms were no

Hendren With The Amateurs

THE CRITICS WIN AT LORD'S

The M.C.C. last month bowed to a storm of criticism which had arisen because Hendren, being the only professional player, had to enter the field by a different gate from that used by the other 21 during the Australians v. M.C.C. match.

The murmur of disgust from the crowded stands was very noticeable on the Saturday, but on the Monday, when soon after noon he emerged from the professionals' entrance to take the field against the Australians, a good minute after the ten M.C.C. amateurs had left the pavilion, it was much stronger by a prolonged cheer, which in volume was quite ten times greater than that which had greeted the whole of his amateur colleagues.

A CHANGE AFTER LUNCH. In the lunch interval someone in authority must have thought matters over, for before the team reappeared Hendren was sent for by his captain and the whole side entered the field from the pavilion, where there was appreciative cheering.

The same procedure was followed after the tea interval. When the M.C.C. entertained the Australian team to dinner Woodfull congratulated Hendren on his great innings on Saturday. "I hope," he said, "he will be the lone hundred maker against us during the tour."

CRICKET CLUB DRAWS

HOME SECRETARY'S LETTER

Fears that sports clubs may be wiped out by the provision of the Betting Bill have produced a reassuring statement on the Government's intentions from the Home Secretary, Sir John Gilmour, in a letter to Sir Edward Campbell, M.P., a vice president of the Club Cricket Conference.

Following a letter from the secretary of the Polygon Cricket Club, which reached the Home Secretary through Sir Edward Campbell, the Home Secretary, in his reply, stated: "In practice the authorities do not interfere with lotteries if they are genuine club schemes and not 'disguised' public lotteries, though as the law stands it would be open to any private individual to institute criminal proceedings, even in the case of small genuine club lotteries."

"Such a situation is admittedly unsatisfactory, and the intention of the Bill is to legalise harmless draws, the promoters of which are at present liable, not merely to a fine, but to imprisonment for three months."

"The conditions proposed in the Bill have been framed with every desire to reduce to a minimum the restrictions on the promotion by clubs of harmless schemes for the purpose of raising funds."

UNLUCKY SOCCER COLOURS?

Mansfield To Revert To Amber And Blue

To appease those supporters who have complained that Mansfield Town have had constant bad luck in the Football League since they adopted blue jerseys three years ago, the directors have decided to apply for permission to revert to amber and blue, the colours they were in the successful Midland League days. They were then in 1928, when they defeated Barrow and Wolverhampton and lost to Arsenal in the F.A. Cup.

Mansfield have signed Desmond Fawcett, a goalkeeper from York City and formerly with Preston. Millwall have signed on R. N. Clark a goalkeeper from Gateshead. He is 22 years of age, stands 5ft. 10in. and weighs 21st.

Crystal Palace have secured from West Bromwich the transfers of Magee (right half-back) and Handley (inside-forward). Manzeo, who played against Wales in 1923 and Scotland in 1925, signed for the Albion in 1919. Originally an outside or inside-right, he became one of the ablest right half-backs in football.

Harbot, the Barrow full-back, has joined Stoke.

CHAMPIONS AND THE U.S.R.C.

CLASH IN "A" & "C" DIVISIONS

The visit of the United Services Recreation Club to the C.R.C. present champions, is the tit-bit of to-day's mixed doubles programme.

The United Services, enjoying the services of several fine players, are making a big bid for the title, and unless there is a strengthening of the Causeway Bay team, everything points to another win for the U.S.R.C.

The Kowloon Cricket Club, hot on the heels of the Services are at home to the L.R.C., and ought to win. In view of the somewhat unsuccessful partnership of E. F. Fincher and Mrs. Miller, the K.C.C. may benefit from making an experimental change in the team.

To-morrow, one of the best ties in the "A" Division is the visit of South China to the Recreio. Last week the Portuguese showed good form against the K.C.C., and are without doubt difficult to beat on their own courts. Their forceful type of play may be even more successful against the Chinese.

Apart from the Recreio's visit to the University, Thursday's "B" Division programme appears to be somewhat featureless, but on Friday, in the "C" Division, South China, regarded by many to be as powerful a side as the C.R.C., entertain the Recreio, and this should provide some spectacular tennis. Craigengower have an interesting match against the Civil Service, but the other leading teams should enjoy easy successes.

SEMI-FINALISTS IN EUROPEAN ZONE OF DAVIS CUP

Czechoslovakia, France Switzerland And Italy

London, June 9. With everything depending on the last match, there was a dramatic finish to the Davis Cup tie between France and Germany in Paris to-day, France eventually emerging victors by the odd rubber in five.

The turning point came in the doubles victory of Borotra and Brugnon, who beat Von Cramm and Donker after a four set match. Forty eight games were played before the decision was reached, and the German pair went very close to winning the fourth set after annexing the first.

Von Cramm continued his winning way in the singles by out-playing Christian Bousset in three sets, and this put the countries level, with the match depending on the game between Andre Merlon and Nourney. Merlon rose gallantly to the

The surprise of the afternoon was the victory of "veteran" Boxing Eve, who won against a field which included Racing Triumph and Daylight Eve. Mr. G. A. Harriman rode a brilliant race.

SURPRISES IN LAWN BOWLS

K.B.G.C. HOLD A CLEAR LEAD

FOR FIRST DIV. CHAMPIONSHIP

Thanks to the very fine performance of the Club de Recreio, who defeated Craignower last string on Saturday, the Kowloon Bowling Green have assumed a lead in the first division of the lawn bowls league from which it will be very difficult to dislodge them.

The K.B.G.C. themselves won very easily and have now the maximum points from half a dozen games, trailed by Craignower teams with eight and six points respectively.

As hinted in these columns on Friday, the Craignower found inspiration in playing on their own green, and in beating Craignower by a dozen points, finished up on two of the three rinks.

The Indian Recreation Club continued their run of successes in the second division with a very fine win at the expense of Civil Service, but at the moment they are headed by the Police having a better average of winning shots.

A rare occurrence was the double success of the K.C.C. teams. The seniors took points away from Taikoo, and the juniors took toll of the Electric.

CHARITY SWIMMING GALA

POPULAR EVENT AT NORTH POINT ON SATURDAY

A record crowd, including many distinguished members of the European and Chinese communities, witnessed representatives from nearly all the local swimming Clubs compete in the special charity swimming gala organised by the South China Athletic Association, in aid of the Society for the Protection of Children, at their Pavilion at North Point on Saturday night. At the conclusion of the events, Lady Southern, wife of the Colonial Secretary, distributed the prizes.

Four of the five open events were carried off by Chinese Clubs, the V.R.C. winning the Men's team race as the only honour for the outside swimmers.

Miss Young Sau King, China's lady champion and Far Eastern champion, was very much to the fore, securing the open ladies' 100 metres event without serious competition. It was regretted that no opposition was offered by the European swimmers in this event.

The S.C.A.A. Ladies' relay team, who were victorious in the Far Eastern Olympic games at Manila won the open relay title, but not without a serious challenge from a comparatively weak Y.M.C.A. Ladies' team, who swam well to take second place.

The open breast stroke event provided a sensation when Miss Chau, who was victorious in the Far Eastern Olympic games at Manila, was beaten by her club-mate, Chan Fook Sing (S.C.A.A.).

Among those present were Lady Southern, the Hon. Mr. R. M. Henderson, the Hon. Mr. P. N. Chan, Mr. A. Hicks, Mr. M. K. Lo, and many others.

Prior to calling upon Lady Southern to present the prizes, Mr. M. K. Lo, President of the S.C.A.A., said that much of the responsibility of the gala was due to the energetic and painstaking work put in by Lady Southern. Sir Thomas Southern was prevented through indisposition from attending although he (Mr. Lo) knew very well that he was keenly interested in the organisation of a charitable swimming gala. The Society for Protection of Children and the Women's Auxiliary Committee had also contributed a large share towards the success of the function.

Mr. Lo also thanked the many workers of the gala; those who had sold tickets, and the China Emporium, Sincere, The Wing On, and the Sun Co., who had kindly donated the prizes.

$900 REAPED.

He remarked that he was glad to announce that the entire number of 300 tickets at $3 each had been sold, and that the sum of $900 would be given to the Society.

Lady Southern said that she would like to express great appreciation of the work the S.C.A.A. had done for the Society. The success of the function had exceeded her widest imagination, with its beautiful scenes, and the immense enthusiasm of the competitors.

Lady Southern also referred to the work of the Society in Hongkong, and commented on the great help and assistance it offered to the welfare of the Colony. She was very glad that the Society had found in the S.C.A.A. an energetic and vigorous body which would help the Society, and hoped that future connections with the club would always remain as successful.

Making a magnificent rally in the last round, Olin Dutra won the American Open Golf Championship at Ardmore today, his card showing 74, 76, 71 and 72 for the four rounds.

Tom Creavy equalled Gene Sarazen's 1933 record for American Championship golf by doing the final round in 66, which is a record for the Merion Course. His wonderful round made him equal the seventh aggregate score of 299, his previous rounds being 79, 76 and 78.

The party then decided to return to the villages visited earlier and to find new tracks from that point. This was carried out and as a result the riders found themselves in a considerable number of the adjacent paths. The route to Customs Tainmu was then covered in the reverse direction with light showers to refresh the cyclists and threaten them with a repetition of the previous weekend's shower-bath.

The 3½-hour trip resulted in no less than 30 miles of unalloyed pleasure, as a further result of which the Club has decided in favour of the exploration of the adjacent paths leading to Tai-po and Sinking next week. Mr. C. Read will exercise his captaincy on this occasion and intends to leave the Ferry at 10.30 a.m. The run will terminate at 4 p.m. approximately, and all interested cyclists are extended a cordial invitation.

occasion and delighted the crowd at the Stade Roland Garros by beating his adversary in three straight sets.

FUJIKURA WINS.

With the encounter already settled, much of the interest in the two concluding matches between the Australians and Japanese at Eastbourne was lost. Nevertheless, Japan succeeded in capturing one rubber, Jiro Fujikura beating Vivian McGrath in splendid style by three sets to one.

Yamauchi was less effective against Don Turnbull, brought in to substitute for Jack Crawford, and was beaten in three sets after a match of 38 games.

No further success attended the New Zealand players after their doubles victory against Czechoslovakia, both E. D. Andrews and O. E. Malfray being outplayed in the last two singles by Hecht and Menzel respectively.

Italy had no mercy on Switzerland and eventually won by five clear rubbers. Rado and Stefani, the Italian singles players both obtained very easy victories against Ellmer and Fischer on the last day.

SEMI-FINALISTS.

The European Zone has now reached the semi-final stage, the countries filling the last four brackets being Czechoslovakia, Italy, France and Australia. France will meet Australia in the semi-final, and the winner of this tie should obtain a fairly comfortable journey into the Inter-zone final at the expense of either Czechoslovakia or Italy. The European Zone final is to be played off by July 16, and the Inter-zone final will be played on July 21, 23 and 24.

The Club's recent activities have called forth a response from other sources and it is learned that there are no less than three military organisations enjoying frequent cycling outings. Local dealers are also at "come-to-stay" in Hongkong and are making every effort to meet the demand for machines.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

Solution to Previous Contract Problem

Don't lead a card blindly, simply because your partner has bid that suit. If your partner makes an opening and it develops into a good attack on the declarer, don't switch.

To-day we find East anxious to obtain a ruff. He has two losing hearts that can be picked up by the declarer; so, because his partner has bid spades, he wishes to try to get a ruff in. That permits the declarer to make his contract.

West's bid of one spade over one heart is, I believe very conservative. He should double. Of course, North and South will arrive at four hearts, and East and West could not make more than three diamonds.

The Play

The opening lead by West is the king of diamonds, which declarer ruffs with the deuce of hearts. He then leads a small heart, winning in dummy with the ace and returning the nine of hearts. East goes right in with the king.

His partner has bid spades—it looks as though, if he were to lead a spade, his partner might win with the ace and he could then get a ruff in with his seven of hearts. But if he had kept track of the trump he would know that South was down to but two trump.

If East returns a spade, South will win with the ace, cash his queen and jack of hearts, picking up the outstanding trump, and will lose only two spade tricks. With the king of hearts, which he has already lost, this gives him four odd.

If East, instead of leading a spade, were to return a diamond, South would be forced to ruff with the jack of hearts. Now South will lead clubs, but the third club will be ruffed by East with the seven of hearts.

East will then lead another diamond, which South will be forced to ruff with the queen of hearts. West will get out of the way with the ace of diamonds, and now the only other trick the declarer can win is the ace of spades, because when he leads a club, East will ruff, cash three good diamonds and, instead of making his contract, the declarer will be down three tricks.

Today's Contract Problem

Can you make six spades for South, with this hand? West opens the king of clubs.

LANE, CRAWFORD MEETING

NO DIVIDEND FOR 1933

Addressing shareholders at the twelfth ordinary yearly meeting of Messrs. Lane, Crawford, Limited, held at Exchange Building on Saturday morning, the Hon. Sir William Shenton (Chairman) said, in part:

The profit for the year on Working account amounts to $92,579.10. Compared with the previous year, this shows a decline of $11,421.22, which is almost entirely attributable to a further shrinkage in turnover. The reiterated explanation of general trade depression and curtailed purchasing power grows monotonous, but it remains none the less applicable.

On the debit side of the Profit and Loss Account you will note that the usual composite charge for Directors' and Auditors' Fees has been subdivided, and Directors' Fees and emoluments now appear as a separate charge in pursuance of requirements of the Companies Ordinance, 1932.

Expenditure on Repairs and Renewals amounts to $2,495.77, as against $7,053.18 in the previous year.

Ample provision has been made for depreciation, and particulars of how the charge of $61,486.47 has been applied, are fully detailed in the Balance Sheet to which I now direct my observations.

The Company's fixed Assets stand at a figure of $2,516,346.07. Particulars of how this total is computed are clearly stated in the Balance Sheet, and shareholders can study without further guidance from me, the direction in which capital expenditure has been incurred during the year. Since, however, the matter of capital expenditure was the subject of a remark by a shareholder at our last yearly Meeting, I wish to point out that, as compared with a figure of $55,409.10 for the previous year, additions to fixed assets during the year amounted to the greatly reduced figure of $22,765.04.

This represents a considerable saving, and has enabled us to divert funds for the purpose of reducing the loan of $2,100,000.00 secured by a Mortgage on Exchange Building. If you refer for a moment to the liabilities, you will note that this loan has during the year under review, been reduced by no less than one lakh, and whilst this may be regarded as eminently satisfactory, I would point out that until such time as we are enabled to reduce this loan to a figure more commensurate with the basic principle as applicable to advances made against property, it is essential that your Company should concentrate on relieving itself of this obligation to its Bankers.

To revert to the Assets. Stock, at the figure of $720,882.54, is considerably less than at the close of the previous year, and I am pleased to state that, by dint of careful buying and energetic selling, there is very little redundant stock on our hands. The figure for Sundry Debtors—$180,948.38—is slightly higher than for the previous year.

No Dividend.

It is a matter of regret to your Directors that they are unable to recommend payment of a Dividend. Under existing conditions, trading results are by no means unsatisfactory, but I believe it will be appreciated by shareholders that their interests are ultimately best served by the policy adopted by your Directors. I accordingly trust you will approve these recommendations.

I will now conclude with a few remarks on our organization. Your property, Exchange Building and Burrows Street—has been maintained in first class order, and you will be gratified to know that, despite new buildings recently erected, Exchange Building continues to attract tenants, and all office accommodation is at present fully occupied.

In its trading during the year under review, your Company has continued to maintain its reputation for supplying highest quality merchandise at reasonable prices throughout all departments. Stocks are comprehensive and cover a wide range of competitive values.

In August last, the Company instituted a highly efficient and expeditious delivery service, which has afforded customers the satisfaction of obtaining fresh commodities at any time between early morning and late evening. Deliveries are now effected to every part of the Colony, including outlying districts, and this convenience is much appreciated by the Company's patrons.

During the year, two valuable agencies were added to the already large list of reputable firms repre-

the situations, an enormous Great Dane dog goes along. After some exciting and ludicrous happenings en route, especially at the Grand Canyon, the quartette arrives at Nuggetville, Nevada, pursued by two detectives who are after Ruggles on suspicion of bank theft. In Nuggetville, Fields and Miss Skipworth get into the picture, the latter as a hotel keeper and the former as the sheriff. The pace of the picture, fast up to this time, becomes breath-taking, and the speed is maintained right to the final fade-out. There is the first picture in which Burns and Allen have featured length roles, and they establish themselves as splendid screen personalities. Miss Allen's every appearance and almost her every line is the signal for renewed laughter from the audience. Mr. Ruggles and Miss Boland continue the excellent work which caused so much favourable comment in "Mama Loves Papa" the whimsical humour of the former and the helplessness of Miss Boland being seen to the best advantage. Mr. Fields is a scream, as always, and Miss Skipworth makes a wonderful second and foil for him. His pool table act, revived from his old Ziegfeld Follies and vaudeville days is one of the highlights of the production. Summed up, "Six of a Kind" is one of the funniest comedies of the season.

sented by the Company. These are the Rolex Watch Co., Ltd., and the Burroughs Adding Machine Co. As you are no doubt aware, the Rolex Watch is known as "The World's Best Wrist Watch"—a title merited by maintaining for many years the highest percentage of all official certificates awarded for high precision wrist watches.

The Burroughs Adding Machines, Calculators, and Book-keeping machines are equally well-known, and, with the general trend towards mechanical accounting, it is hoped that this agency will prove a remunerative source of income. I would mention that two Bank Posting Machines have already been installed in a local bank.

As an announcement of especial interest to the ladies of the Colony, I would state that excellent arrangements have been made for deliveries of the very latest styles in Ladies' and Misses' Gowns, Hats, etc. from New York, and with these added to our shipments from London and Paris, our Ladies' Salon will be in a position to meet the requirements of the most fastidious.

In conclusion I would like to express thanks of the Directors and shareholders for the loyal co-operation of the staff during the year.

I now beg to formally propose that the Report and Accounts for the year ended February 28, 1934, as presented, be adopted, and shall be glad if some shareholder will second the proposal. When this has been done, I shall be pleased to answer any questions shareholders may wish to ask.

Mr. S. M. Churn: I have great pleasure in seconding the adoption of the report and accounts as presented. Carried unanimously.

The re-election of Mr. T. E. Pearce, retiring director, was proposed by Mr. P. H. Suckling and seconded by Mr. E. J. Ainslie, and was carried unanimously.

The re-election of Messrs. Linstead and Davis as auditors at a remuneration of $1,750, was proposed by Mr. F. C. Barry and seconded by Mr. D. M. Goodall, and was carried unanimously.

Those present were: The Hon. Sir William Shenton (Chairman), Messrs. T. E. Pearce, E. M. Raymond, A. B. Stewart and J. H. Taggart (Directors). Shareholders present were: Messrs. S. M. Churn, P. H. Suckling, F. C. Barry, J. M. de Figueiredo, D. M. Goodall, E. J. Ainslie, B. S. Rogers, D. K. Kharras, O. F. Ribeiro, jun., K. C. Mark Sau-kin, and H. R. Forsyth (representing Messrs. Linstead and Davis).

JAPAN AND U.S.

IMPORTANT PARLEYS IN HONOLULU

Washington, June 9.
Prominent Japanese in Washington were guests at a luncheon given by President Roosevelt to-day in honour of Prince Fumimaro Kono, President of the Japanese House of Peers.

It is stated that President Roosevelt expressed his willingness to receive Japanese statesmen and delegates during his forthcoming visit to Honolulu.

It is understood the Japanese Press suggested the meeting as a Pacific Goodwill gesture.—United Press.

Misunderstandings.

Washington, June 9.

It is believed possible that the Honolulu meeting of President Roosevelt and the Japanese will go far towards removing the grounds for misunderstanding between the United States and Japan.

It will also afford an excellent opportunity for a first hand discussion of international problems including the Open Door in China, Recognition of Manchukuo, the Nine Power Treaty, Naval Ratios, the status of independent Philippine Islands and the possibility of an Immigration quota for Japan.—United Press.

Geneva, June 9.

BANKRUPTCY COURT

PARTNERSHIP ISSUE RAISED IN PETITION

The hearing of the petition of bankruptcy against the Yu Chun Sauce Factory, and Cheng King, Li Fook-san and Mak Yik-yu, managing partners, was adjourned on the application of Mr. H. L. Denny, creditor, Mak Yik-yu, in view of submission made by Mr. F. H. Losely, who opposed the petition, before His Honour the Chief Justice, Mr. A. D. A. MacGregor at the Supreme Court on Saturday morning.

Mr. Losely opposed the petition on the grounds that the petitioning creditor was a partner in the Yu Chun Sauce Factory, and, therefore, could not apply for the bankruptcy of the firm. Supporting his opposition he produced two documents signed by the petitioning creditor as a partner in the firm.

Mr. Denny stated that he had not hitherto heard of these documents. His Lordship adjourned the case, in order that a trial of the issue as to whether the petitioning creditor was a partner, or not, could be held.

Order Rescinded.

An interim receiving order against the Yu Chun Firm was rescinded on the application of the Official Receiver, Mr. J. J. Hayden.

Mr. F. X. d'Almada, Sr., appearing for the petitioning creditor, Lau Ping-chau, stated that the debtor firm owed his client $770.83, and that an interim receiving order had already been made, the grounds of bankruptcy being a notice of the suspension of payment of debts.

Lau Ping-chau, in evidence stated that he had received the notice of suspension of payment. The managing partner of the Yu Chun Firm had told him that the firm held goods valued at $60,000, and about $50,000 debts. The liabilities were approximately $250,000, and there were doubtful debts amounting to approximately $70,000.

Mr. Hayden opposed the application, and the interim order was withdrawn.

Owed Over $10,000. A receiving order was made against the Kung Chung Loong Firm, on the petition of Chung Size-chu, represented by Mr. F. G. Nigel.

Yong Hong-long, manager of the petitioning firm stated that when he received a notice of the suspension of payment by the debtor firm, they owed his firm $10,334.53.

As the result of the notice sent by the Kung Chung Loong firm he had sent a bill to their premises, and this bill had been told that the managing partners had all absconded.

There had been no accurate method of ascertaining the financial position of the firm, but a paper was found by the firm which showed liabilities to the extent of $60,000, and assets to the extent of $8,000.

Witness stated that he had conferred with the other creditors who had agreed on the course of action he had taken.

Mr. Nigel, stating that the assets appeared to be much less than 15 per cent. of the liabilities, asked that the receiving order should be made.

Petition Withdrawn. A petition for the bankruptcy of the Hing Nam Construction Company and Lau Wah, Choy Wing-chek, partners, was withdrawn on the application of Mr. H. L. Denny, appearing for Lam Shing, petitioning creditor.

Mr. Denny stated that it had been disclosed that the assets of the firm were in excess of 15 per cent. of the

RECOGNITION

SOVIET

Geneva, June 9.
It is officially announced that Rumania and Czechoslovakia have formally recognised Russia.

It is announced that Yugo-Slavia will decide whether or not she will recognise the Soviet after her Foreign Minister, M. Yovitch returns to Belgrade and reports to the Government.

It is understood that King Alexander is opposed to recognition and it was because of this objection that the Little Entente abandoned the plan for joint recognition.

Dr. Benes (Czechoslovakia), M. Titulescu (Rumania) and M. Yevitch (Yugo-Slavia) negotiated with M. Litvinoff until 1 a.m. regarding the recognition of Russia by the Little Entente.

Details regarding recognition by Czechoslovakia and Rumania were arranged but several minor points have to be settled before Yugo-Slavia agrees to recognise the Soviet.

It was at first believed that recognition would be delayed until a meeting of the Little Entente in Bucharest in the middle of June.—United Press.

JAPAN WILL NOT APPLY ARMS EMBARGO

Tokyo, June 9.
The Japanese Government has instructed the Japanese Consul-General at Geneva to inform the League of Nations that Japan would not join in an embargo on the supply of arms to belligerents. The refusal is made on the grounds that, as Japan announced her withdrawal from the League of Nations in March, 1933, she feels that it would be inappropriate for her now to participate in the arms embargo movement under the auspices of the League of Nations.—Central News.

MOSLEY MEETINGS BROKEN UP

HITLER-MUSSOLINI MEETING

Fixed Definitely For Week-End

Rome, June 11.

EXCITING CHASE IN HARBOUR

REVENUE MEN FIRE ON MOTORBOAT

WARNING SHOTS

Shots were fired by revenue officers at suspected opium smugglers during a thrilling chase across the harbour in the early hours of this morning.

A motorboat which had put out from an upriver boat arriving last night, was followed by revenue officers in another motorboat. A warning signal to the suspect craft to heave-to for the purpose of a search, passed by unheeded, and as the quarry accelerated speed, the chase took on the aspect of a race across the western section of the harbour.

Warning shots from the revenue craft ultimately had the effect of forcing the suspected boat to close inshore. Two men leaped from the boat on to the quay, but at that moment a car appeared along the waterfront and knocked down one of them. Although not very seriously injured, he was unable to make his escape and was arrested, together with his companion.

Five tads of opium of Kwangsi origin was found in their possession. It is reported.

The injured man has gone into the Government Civil Hospital.

A COMEDY OF ERRORS

PIRACY SCARE ENDS IN INJURY

A comedy of errors, attended by an almost tragic sequel, was reported by the police yesterday concerning two native craft anchored at Taku Chau, a small island between Ping Chau and Cheung Chau, in British waters.

A sampan waiting for the approach of night to commence fishing operations, became an object of suspicion to the crew of a junk leading bricks in the vicinity, who, thinking that the other craft was a pirate, waiting for reinforcements from the island before carrying out an attack, discharged a volley of shots at it. The arms used were two ancient muskets, and one of these, firing some rusty nails, found a mark in the body of one of the two fishermen on the sampan. His companion, on his part believing that they were being attacked by pirates, instantly dived overboard and swam ashore.

Matters were restored to their true light when police officers, summoned to the spot, commenced an investigation. Two men from the junk, who had been arrested, were released.

The injured fisherman, Fan Yan, aged 25, entered hospital for treatment of a minor injury.

TURBULENT CROWDS IN LONDON

FEAR OF CREATION OF RIVAL FORCES

HOME SECRETARY UNDER FIRE

London, June 6.
The little affair at the Olympia on Thursday night when scores were injured in clashes with the Mosley Black Shirts, notably among interrupters in the hall itself, may have a sequel.

Great interest is centred upon a number of questions to be asked in the House of Commons to-day in reference to alleged Fascist brutality at Olympia and with a view to extracting the Government's latest attitude on the whole question of political uniforms and the Fascists' military marching.

Some members of the House are expected to press for a debate on the subject which the Government will hardly be able to refuse.

RIVAL ARMIES?

Others will press for legislation banning political uniforms and private armies, with a view to curbing the activities of the Fascists and also with a view to forestalling possible opposition forces that might be organised by Sir Stafford Cripps or the Communists.

Meanwhile, evidence of the feeling among some sections of the public was provided yesterday when four Fascist open-air meetings in various parts of London were broken up by turbulent crowds or were abandoned on the advice of the police owing to the menacing attitude of the crowds.

Four persons were arrested in the course of the day in connection with the organised campaign against the Fascist meetings.—Reuter.

BILLION DOLLAR BILL FOR ROADS

Rushed Through Congress In Two Days

Washington, June 10.
The Road Construction Bill, providing for the expenditure of a thousand million dollars on new highways in the United States as an unemployment relief measure, has been quickly passed through the House of Representatives and the Senate and has been sent to the White House for the President's signature.—Reuter.

STUDENT FEUD AT UNIVERSITY

SIXTEEN INJURED AT CHAOYANG

Peking, June 11.
The compound of the Chaoyang University threatened to become a battle arena yesterday when hostile groups of students attempted to settle a dispute by a free fight. The timely arrival of a contingent of armed police stopped it before it developed seriously.

The trouble arose out of a dispute on Saturday over the allotment of seats in the dining hall of the university to students from Honan and Kwangtung which developed into a provincial feud. Sixteen students were injured.—Central News Agency.

U.S. STEEL STRIKE THREAT

Decision Postponed Till Thursday

Washington, June 10.
A decision regarding the threatened steel strike has been postponed until June 14, when a special convention summoned at Pittsburgh of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, to decide the question. General Johnson, NRA Administrator, has been invited to attend.—Reuter.

MURDERED BY POLICE!

INDIGNANT DENIAL BY NANKING

NOT A TRACE YET FOUND

FABRICATIONS: SINISTER MOTIVE

Nanking, June 11.
The whereabouts of Mr. Kuramoto, Japanese vice-consul at Nanking, still remains a mystery, despite the efforts of the local gendarmerie, and the detective branch, who have scoured the whole city without securing the slightest clue.

It is conjectured in one quarter that he may have left the capital on a private tour of the surrounding districts.

It is reported from Shanghai that some person or persons claimed to have sighted Mr. Kuramoto yesterday in a motor car. This observer said that "Mr. Kuramoto" seemed to be making a hasty trip towards the Bund, where he might have caught a Dairen-bound steamer.

Commenting on this report, a Japanese spokesman stated that it was merely a rumour. The Nanking authorities say that any suggestion that Mr. Kuramoto might be the victim of a kidnapping gang is almost unbelievable, as no kidnapping case had ever occurred in the capital.—Central News.

NANKING ANXIETY.

Nanking, June 11.
Government leaders are growing anxious about the disappearance of Mr. Kuramoto.

High Chinese officials, interviewed this morning, expressed indignation over reports to the effect that "Mr. Kuramoto was kidnapped by Chinese Special Police outside the Japanese Consulate and murdered later."

A Chinese official expressed the hope that the payee abroad would be misled by false reports on the Kuramoto case which were fabricated and spread for certain "sinister motives."—Reuter.

There were 15 entries.

Leung Mei-lo, a pigwash carrier, was sentenced to four months' hard labour by Mr. Hamilton, at the Central Magistracy this morning, for the theft of a radiator cap from a car belonging to Mr. Start, of the China Fleet Club, at Wanchai. Defendant said he picked up the cap in the street three days ago.

CAPITAL SHIPS FOR ITALY

CHANGE OF POLICY EXPLAINED

DISARMAMENT FAILURE

(Special to "Telegraph")

Rome, June 11.
In an official communique explaining the decision of the Italian Government to lay down two 35,000-ton battleships this year, it is stated that Italy has hitherto abstained from building battleships in the cause of naval disarmament.

It is pointed out that these ships were allotted to Italy under the Washington Treaty, but they were not ordered "in order not to jeopardise the eventual result of the naval conference in particular, and the results of the armaments limitation conference in general."

"In consequence of the situation arrived lately in regard to the naval armaments of virtually all the countries in the world, the Fascist Government now deems it fit to give the Italian Navy that organic composition which appears indispensable in view of the lack of accord on qualitative limitation."—United Press.

35,000 TONNERS TO BE LAID DOWN

Rome, June 10.
Following Signor Mussolini's decision to build up the Italian Navy to the limits of the Washington Treaty, announced at the end of last month, two great battleships are to be constructed.

An official announcement states that the vessels will—each be of 35,000 tons and will be laid down before the end of the present year, one at Trieste and the other at Genoa.—Reuter.

Bulgarian Troops Shot Down

FIRST BRUSH WITH COMITADJIS

(Special to "Telegraph")

Sofia, June 10.
The new Fascist Government in Bulgaria has met with a sharp setback in its efforts to break the power of the Comitadjis in Macedonia.

The first round of the drive against the Comitadjis—the so-called terrorist organisation of the peasants—resulted in many casualties among the Government forces. Four soldiers were shot dead.

The new mayor of a Macedonian City just appointed by the new government was also shot dead.

Meanwhile, another important development in Bulgarian affairs is believed to be heralded by the unexpected arrival in Sofia of a representative of the Bank of England.

It is believed that the visit is connected with the possible devaluation of the leva.—Reuter.

MR. DODGE TAKES CHILDREN TO ENGLAND

New York, June 10.
The kidnapping menace in the United States shows no sign of diminishing and the wealthiest of the country's citizens are becoming anxious.

Mr. Horace Dodge, the famous Detroit motorboat racer, has left the United States for England, as the result of threats to the safety of his children.

He has taken his son and daughter with him, owing to fears that they might be kidnapped if they remained in the United States.

They were escorted to the liner by a stalwart bodyguard, which had been engaged in closely watching the children since their arrival in New York.

It is understood that the children will remain in England indefinitely.—Reuter Special.

Manila, June 11.
The inter-island steamer Mactan to-day landed ninety-two passengers in Manila after taking them off the Hongkong-bound steamer Changte, which went aground on Matanal Point on Thursday evening.

Fourteen of the Changte's passengers now in Manila are Europeans, the remainder being Chinese.

They are expected to travel to Hongkong aboard another steamer.

The Changte grounded on a mudbank as far as can be ascertained and suffered no serious damage. None of the passengers was harmed.

She was refloated this morning and is expected to arrive in Manila under her own power to-morrow.—United Press.

The local agents, Messrs. Butterfield and Swire, state that the Changte is now expected in Hongkong on or about Friday.

The passengers are coming up on the Empress of Asia.

JAPAN'S PLACE IN CHINA

FAR EAST BARRIER TO BOLSHEVISM

A SURVEY OF WORLD POLITICS

(SPECIAL TO "TELEGRAPH")

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received, June 11, 11.27 a.m.)

London, June 11.

A remarkable interview with the ex-Kaiser Wilhelm at Doorn, in which the former German Emperor surveys the political world at large and hints that nothing will stop Japan's ambitions in China, is published this morning in the Daily Mail, well-known for its advocacy of a policy of giving Japan absolute liberty to do as she wills in China.

The interview was given by the ex-Kaiser to Mr. Randolph Churchill, the young son of Mr. Winston Churchill. Mr. Randolph Churchill was recently appointed "Special Editor" of the Daily Mail.

A HOHENZOLLERN ON HITLER

The Man of Doorn told Mr. Randolph Churchill that he had been very impressed by the increasing power of Japan and he went on in a vein suggesting that his pre-war ideas of a European combination to bring Japan to a halt have undergone a complete change.

"It is useless to think," he said, "that growth of Japanese power in China can now be prevented."

"Japan is as capable of giving China peace and order as the British were in giving it to India."

BULWARK AGAINST REDS.
"Moreover," the ex-Kaiser went on, "Japan constitutes the eastern bulwark against Bolshevism, as strong as Germany in the West."

The ex-Kaiser was extremely sceptical about the future of the League of Nations and about its value in international relationships. He laughed at the folly of merely talking disarmament when the nations were actually very busily engaged in re-arming.

TALKING CIRCUS.

"The talking circus at Geneva has done nothing but bring international co-operation into ridicule. The trouble in Europe to-day is that there are plenty of politicians but few statesmen."

The ex-Kaiser also dealt with the growth of dictatorships in Europe and said that there could be no doubt that democracy was on the wane on the Continent.

STERNER MEASURES.

"Stern measures appear to be necessary everywhere to combat the perils of anarchism and bolshevism."

They called her OLD MAID she's MRS. now!

Lipstick
brings the beauty man admires.

LIKE all fastidious women, she refused to look painted. But for awhile, she made the mistake of using no lipstick. With the result that her lips were pale, old-maidish. Every woman should avoid a conspicuous painted look. Men don't like it. But now it is possible to give lips the youthful color men admire, without risking a painted appearance. It is Tangee Lipstick, for Tangee contains a magic color-change principle that intensifies your natural coloring.

LOOKS ORANGE—ACTS ROSE

In the sick Tangee looks orange. But put it on and notice how it changes on your lips. Takes on the one shade of rose most becoming to your coloring. The natural shade for you. Moreover, Tangee is made with a special cream base to soothe and softens lips while it adds to their allure. Prevents lips from drying or chapping. Also in Theatrical, a deeper shade for professional use.

UNTOUCHED—Lips left untouched are apt to have a faded look. Make the face smolder.

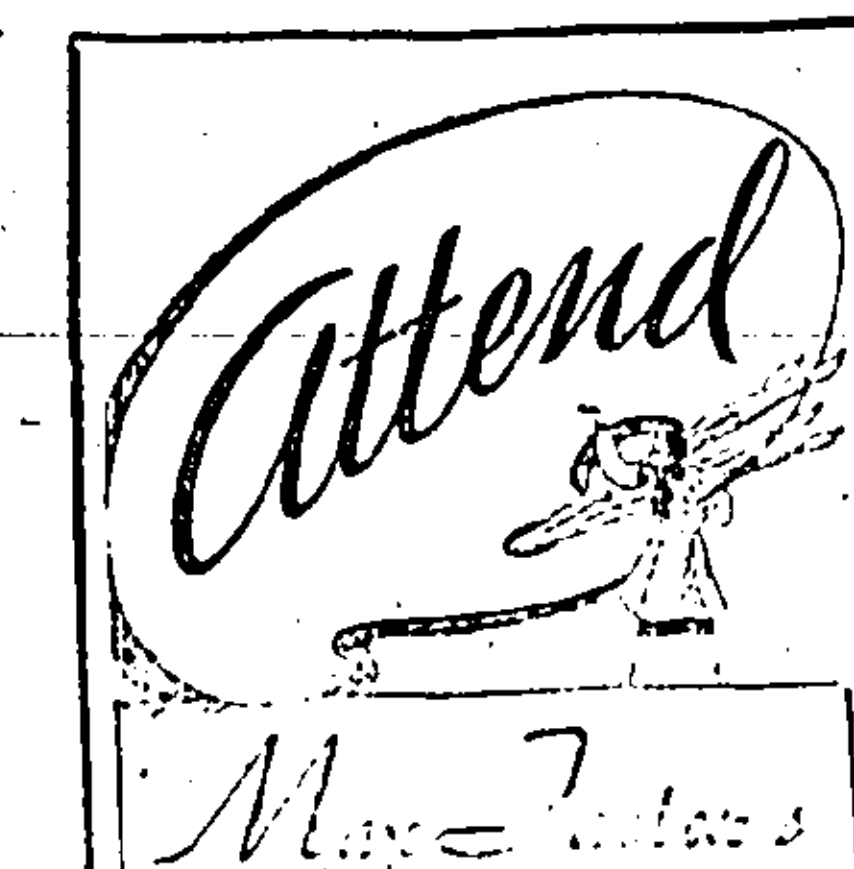

PAINTED—Don't risk that painted look. It's cramping and men don't like it.

TANGEE—Intensifies natural color, removes smudged appeal, ends that painted look.

GAS EXPLOSION SUFFERERS

AID OF PERMANENT VALUE FOR SOME VICTIMS' CASES UNDER REVIEW

Contributors to the Fund instituted by the Telegraph for the relief of sufferers in the gasworks disaster will be interested to learn that the administration of the monies subscribed is still being proceeded with.

In addition to the emergency cash grants made, further sums have now been distributed in cases which have undergone review. The process of reviewing the worst cases is still continuing.

Excellent use has also been made of the funds by setting up in business some of the sufferers who lost all their belongings in the disaster.

In one case, in which nine members of a family were burned to death, including the father (a shoemaker), the widow and other survivors have been supplied with leather, tools, machine, etc.

In another case, in which a father and son were burned to death and the mother and baby severely burned, the widow has been supplied with a hawkers' licence and money with which to buy baskets and flowers. She has to report again to the distributing centre later.

Applications have also been made for hawkers' licences for other women who lost their possessions in the fire, and the police have been most considerate and helpful in these cases.

Over-Developed Inhibitions

By Olive Roberts Barton

Inhibitions are the policemen of character. They keep law and order in the streets of our minds and prevent natural desire and impulse from running wild. These moral guards, as they might be called, can work for ill as well as for good. In fact, when they get to a point where they over-balance normal living and throttle every natural urge and instinct, they cause trouble.

To delve into adult experience for a moment, let us take a man who was brought up rigidly in a tiny prejudiced community miles away from anywhere. His people looked upon any type of pleasure or laughter as a sin and mortified the flesh by every sort of self-denial possible. Work was their god—asceticism their passion and unlikeness their creed. They made a religion of all the negatives of life and joy was the devil they fought.

Feeling of "Guilt"

This boy grew to manhood, we'll say, and found himself in a small city whose pleasures were a normal part of life. He became successful in business. He could never become successful with himself or be happy.

His reason told him that games and sports and parties were honorable and legitimate, but his inhibitions allowed him no peace. His body attended; but his mind could not, nor his heart. A feeling of guilt pervaded his whole being whenever pleasure beckoned. He had lost all ability to play. This is the trouble with inhibitions—they do not always keep within their province. These policemen over-step their duties and not only keep order, but prevent the natural outlet of other mind-rights. The mind has rights, rights to joy and pleasure, and if it cannot break through and satisfy its normal cravings to a normal extent it turns in on itself. Unhappiness results.

Technically the definition of an inhibition is "substituting one impulse for another." Morally it means "conscience keeping us straight."

But what conscience is, is a matter for discussion. The canibal eats his enemy or even his friend with a clear conscience, but he would break every moral tenet of his tribe and of himself if he dropped his little wooden fetish in his soup, and it might even drive him to suicide.

Factor of Self-Control
If a sense of right and wrong can be developed in a child through himself it is better than to leave it all to the deaconess and the social code.

A parent can overdo the idea of self-control. There is not so much danger to-day as formerly, however, when our more rigid ancestors gloried in renunciation. Perhaps we are even swinging to the other extreme. But it is not wise to accept "guilt" sense when there is no need.

Over-developed inhibitions throttle normal conduct. They are conscience gone on a rampage, in a way.

There should be a nice balance of things to do and things not to do. If there are enough happy experiences to balance the more rigid codes a child will accept both. He will be inhibited to a healthy extent but not fanatical, or emotionally starved when he is grown.

Style of Coiffure Should Depend On Your Type

By Alicia Hart

"How shall I fix my hair so that I won't look like everyone else?" One out of every five letters that come to my desk asks that question.

First of all, no smart woman should consider sacrificing a tasteful and flattering coiffure for one that is so "different" as to appear grotesque or conspicuous. Any girl likes to feel that her hair is a

Let's consider what can happen to the average woman with average hair. There's no use in telling her to dress it in a fashion meant to be worn only in hair style shows. Aside from the fact that such coiffure creations are too "different" to be flattering to anyone but an exotic stage beauty, they are, generally speaking, highly impractical. They won't withstand a hat nor a strong wind nor anything else for that matter. So the simple hair styles are best for anyone who leads an active life—at least for daytime anyway.

Most women look prettier when their hair is waved softly about their faces. However, if you are lucky enough to have classic features that need no softening touches, wear your hair straight and be glad that you don't have to bother getting it waved. But, such fortunate types are few and far between. For the average, wide, loose waves, brushed back smoothly from the face are easy to keep in place and usually are most becoming.

CHAPTER XXII

Gypsy, assembling towels, soap, powder and olive oil, scolded herself, "I'm a bad mother." What a lot you needed for a baby! She had never realized it before. Quite callously she had criticized young mothers for not doing this, doing that. "Keeping up," it was generally called. And yet how could you expect them to play bridge, to read the latest books, to be bright and interesting when they faced such mountainous tasks day after day?

David was naughty that morning. Perhaps he missed the expert ministrations of the absent Mrs. Burby. Perhaps he sensed the nervousness of his young mother. At any rate he cried. He cried and cried and cried.

Gypsy was shaking with nervousness and fatigue when the ordeal of the morning bath was finished. A cold perspiration beaded her upper lip and her knees sagged as she laid the now sleepy, immaculate infant in his crib.

Could she possibly go at the rest of the disorder now? And where was Tom? He hadn't even telephoned. She was ready to cry with weakness and discouragement.

A key grated in the lock and Tom ushered in a big, blond, clean-skinned young woman wearing a long, unfashionable coat. "This is Elsa, darling," Tom announced. "She's going to do whatever you want her to."

Elsa worked part-time. Three days a week she came at eight and stayed until one. The other four days she came at one and stayed until seven, leaving dinner prepared. She was slow, tireless, clean.

After that things went more smoothly. Elsa was a treasure, Tom and Gypsy told each other. She was a jewel.

"How we can afford it I simply don't know," Gypsy would say, frowning over the bills. But there was now no question in her mind about letting Elsa go. It was simply not to be thought of, Tom said, and she agreed. Until she was stronger, at least.

The baby grew—flourished. The days rushed by, punctuated only by bath-time, nap-time, feeding-time. Sometimes the imperturbable Elsa stayed in the evening and the young Weavers dashed out to a movie. But this was not often. The budget was strained too tight to allow much entertainment.

"What did we ever do with our money before?" Gypsy wondered artlessly aloud one stormy November night when she had established herself in the big chair opposite Tom. Silk stockings and mauls, cures, aundae and matinees and now hats—why, she had thought nothing of all these before her marriage! Now they seemed the supreme luxuries.

A wall from the bedroom interrupted her reverie. She rushed in, to find two pink hands waving above the blankets.

"Isn't he wonderful?" she marvelled. "Isn't he the most precious thing alive?" Tom said he was. Surely no other baby in the metropolis waked exactly on the dot of feeding-time, as David did. Tom held him while Gypsy warmed the bottle, testing it against her cheek as she had seen Mrs. Burby do.

He was a beautiful baby, he was beyond price. But if only he didn't waken so early in the morning. If only his demands and his needs would not multiply daily! No matter how much Elsa did there was always a full quota of tasks for David's mother. It seemed to Gypsy she was nearly always tired these nights. Almost too tired to talk to Tom, to be gay and amusing and interested. Pushing the baby's carriage over the sidewalks was a dull duty.

Gypsy laughed at herself, at her absorption, but deep down she was conscious of a pin prick of fear. Tom went out into the world every morning. He came into contact with new ideas, new people. While she—well, she was just a vegetable these days, she told herself, smiling wryly. Tom always contradicted her loyally when she said these things. But could he help seeing it? She wondered.

The McKinnon's little blue-roofed house she remembered dimly, as in a dream, envying the woman who sang now among its copper kettles and looked out at the bare branches of the orchard. Having a baby in the city had its drawbacks. Some days—some not too distant days—they must find a little place with a yard and a tree where David could grow and flourish. But what if things went on as they were now? No more money, no better prospects—what then?

Helen Marr came to call, and Blanche Jordan. They admired the baby, they brought him presents. Everyone was sweet and kind. They gave advice. They told Gypsy she must go about more—mustn't let herself get rusty. Helen asked her to lunch at the Plaza and Gypsy wriggled out of the invitation as gracefully as possible because she hadn't a new hat.

"Why didn't you go with her, sweets?" Tom wanted to know. And Gypsy made some excuse because she wouldn't hurt him by saying she'd nothing decent to wear. Besides, no matter where she went these days she was forever flying back to the baby. Was he warm enough? Was Elsa careful? If there should be a fire... No, she would not leave him for long. Silly—it was all silly, but sometimes when she looked at him asleep his littleness and helplessness and preciousness squeezed at her heart.

She found herself weeping a good deal at this time; weeping for no reason at all, or for the slightest of reasons. She would be gulping back sobs. They would choke her throat, tears would flood her eyes. "I am a fool," she would tell herself after one of these brief storms. But she was not strong yet.

"You're much too pale and thin," her mother told her when the family came over from Blue Hills. She scolded Gypsy all afternoon—"lots of milk... beef tea... a good nap after lunch." Gypsy listened, nodded, agreed. Useless to remark that her resting times and David's did not coincide. When her back was on fire, when her eyes stung and her feet were weary, David was wide-awake, big-eyed, ready for his napping. When David slept indoors there were dozens of things to do. She had no time to cold cream her face, nor give her hair the many strokes it had been accustomed to. Her nails were short and guiltless of enamel. If she sat down with a book or a day-old newspaper she soon felt herself nodding off. No, David's demands upon his young mother were prodigious. No use to tell Mrs. Morell all this. It would only worry her.

"You ought to give up this place," Gypsy's mother would say in her gentle, fretful tones, looking about her disinterestedly at the cream-coloured walls and the bright curtains. "You ought to come in with us. Bea can move back into her old room and I can fix the sewing room up for the baby."

Gypsy had heard all this a dozen times before. She was tempted—she was often tempted. The vision of herself in the big, shabby, friendly old house; of Glytte, rushing up to her with one of the oldtime breakfast trays; of a shadowy someone "taking baby off your hands"... It was all terrifically alluring. But no—aside from the fact that such an arrangement would be unfair to her parents, she felt strongly that it would be also a wound to their pride, hers and Tom's.

So she would put the generous, well-meant invitation aside with gentleness. "You know we have a lease here, Mums."

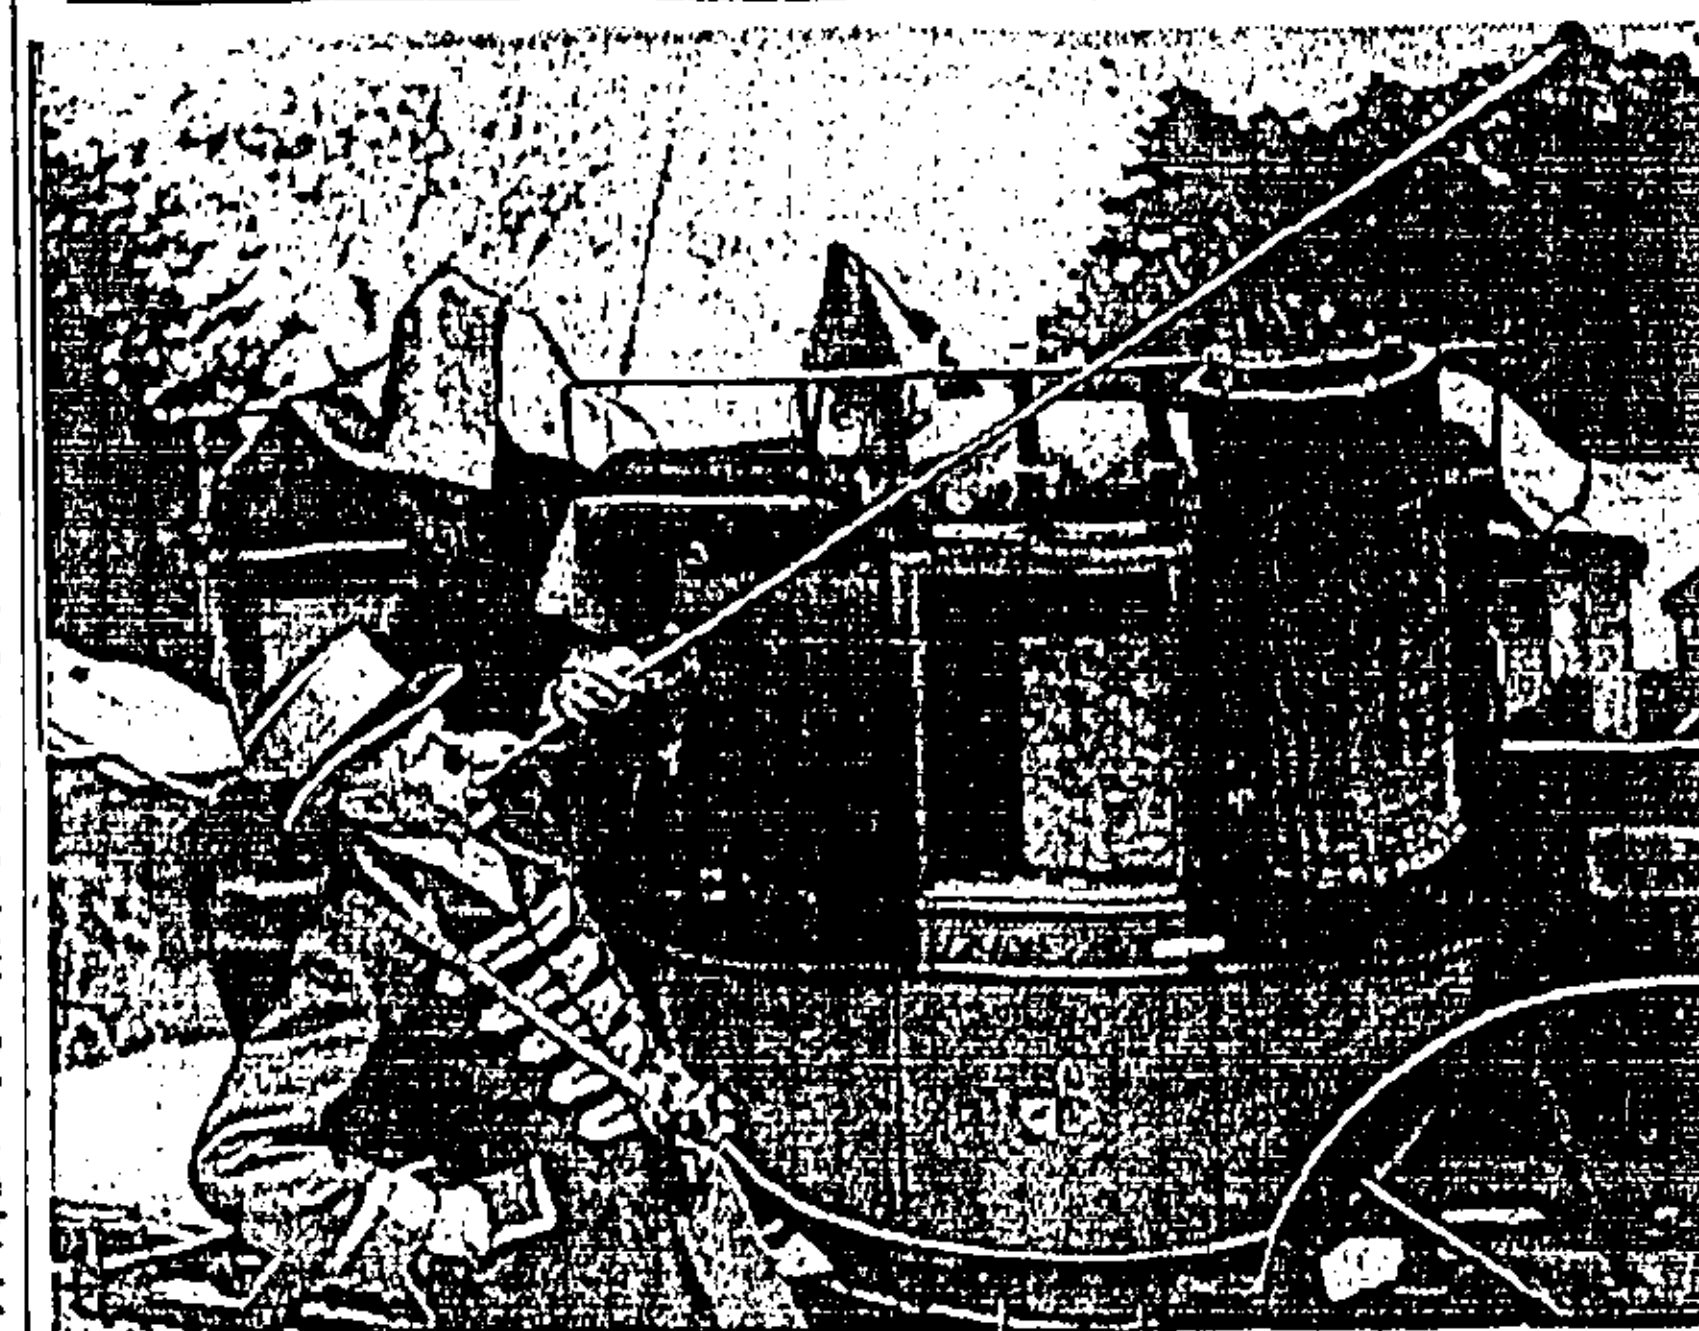

Mrs. Morell brushed this aside with characteristic lightness. "Well, break it, break it. Other people do..."

Gypsy would smile, sigh and change the subject. No, their problem could not be solved this way.

Meantime she saved, she bought cheap cuts of beef for ragouts, she contrived a delicious pudding with one egg and some scraps of bread. She taught the silent Elsa to save bits of butter and cream. She walked to the chain stores, pushing the rosy baby in his dark blue carriage, to buy the things listed in the day's advertisement as "specials." There was nothing she did not know these days about balancing the food budget. Was this the same Gypsy who had danced far into the morning hours 18 months ago, who had spent a whole week's wages on a silly little hat with a feather? It was—and yet it was not. Gypsy's high colour was dimmed. Her laugh rose less readily to her lips. Her step was not so light. And yet there were moments—as witness New Year's eve when she wore her old red crepe with a new sheer frill—when one caught a glimpse of the old gaiety and wildness.

PASSING OF FREDERICK DELIUS

ONE OF BRITAIN'S MOST EMINENT

By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages, Ltd., London, 1934. Received June 11, 4.55 a.m.

London, June 10.
Frederick Delius, the famous British composer, died to-day at his home near Paris, Grez-sur-Loing, being the third of England's most eminent musicians to pass away within a few weeks.

Virtually an invalid in the closing years of his life, he had since 1924 suffered from the additional handicap of blindness, and was generally referred to as the Blind Composer.

His mind remained clear and active in spite of his blindness and of his partial paralysis caused by multiple sclerosis. Whenever it was fine, he was taken down to sit in his garden, and thanks to wireless he was able to listen to concerts, including performances of his own works.

In 1929, Eric Fenby, a young Yorkshireman, went to Grez and a system of musical dictation was worked out by which enabled Delius to compose more easily and stimulated his creative faculty with the result that he completed a fine setting of Dowson's poem "Cynara".

COMPANION OF HONOUR.

Much gratified by being made a Companion of Honour in January, 1929, Delius was given a new lease of life by the remarkable tribute paid him by his native land in November which took the form of a musical festival in London lasting several days at which Sir Thomas Beecham conducted his principal work. The composer attended all the performances and declared that the festival had been the time of his life.

Sir Thomas who had done so much to rescue Delius's works from neglect, claimed that Delius had written more beautiful music than any other living composer.
The musician returned to France determined to compose more works, having been greatly inspired by the reception accorded to him in England.

WISTFUL MUSIC.

His music is for the most part dreamy and contemplative, full of wistful retrospection, even in its gayer moments, the embodiment of emotion recollected in tranquility.
In an interview he said he owed much to the negro music he heard while in Florida. It was much more harmonious than the negro "spirituals" and was quite unlike jazz, an invention of Americans who had taken ragtime and pretended that it was negro music. Delius was very severe on some of the modernists, describing their compositions as "wrong note music" and declaring that they were merely sensationalists.

Delius was born at Bradford, Yorkshire, in January, 1863. His family was of German origin. He was educated at Bradford Grammar School and the London International College, Islington.

PLANTER IN FLORIDA.

It was intended that he should go in for business but he soon abandoned the idea and went in 1884 as a planter to Florida where he devoted his spare time to musical study. After 2 years he returned to Europe and worked under Judasohn and Reinecke at the Leipzig Conservatorium from 1886 to 1888, but he probably learnt more from Grieg, who was then studying the art of scoring for a modern orchestra there.
Delius afterwards took up his abode in France, spending 8 years in Paris which he forewent for Grez-sur-Loing in the Forest of Fontainebleau. This has been his home ever since, though he has travelled in many lands.

He was in Norway in 1897 when his incidental music to Helberg's play "Folkelandet" was produced and his satirical use of the national anthem caused a sensation.
In 1899 he gave a concert of his compositions in London. His fantasia-overture "Over the Hills and far away" was given in 1893 at Elberfeld where his first opera
"Koanga" was produced in 1896.
His second opera "A Village Romeo and Juliet" was first performed at the Komische Oper in Berlin in 1907 and was produced by Sir T. Beecham at Covent Garden in 1910. A third opera
"Fennimore and Gerda" was staged at Frankfurt soon after the armistice.

NOTABLE WORKS.

"MANSLAUGHTER" MYSTERY

CHARGES LIKELY TO BE WITHDRAWN

When Mak Pan, Lo Hin-choi and Shum Pin, all coolies of the Sanitary Department, and Mak Shi, alias, Tau Pui-chai, a street coolie, appeared before Mr. Mac-fadyen in the Central Police Court this afternoon, charged with the manslaughter of Siu Tong, alias Pun Yee-chai, an unlicensed hawker, at Tunk Lane, on the night of May 10, the Assistant Crown Solicitor, Mr. W. J. Lockhart-Smith, stated the question of abandoning the prosecution had been considered.

Mr. Lockhart-Smith added that the Police would make a formal application shortly. Both the Attorney General (Hon. Mr.
Lindell) and himself were of the opinion that there was not enough evidence to justify even committal proceedings.

The accused were formally remanded in goal until the application is made.

It is recalled that two chair coolies stated to the Police that about 9 p.m. two Chinese approached them in Chung Wo Lane with another man whom they asked them to take to the Government Civil Hospital. Thinking that the man was unwell, they complied.
They had gone some distance when they found that the two men had disappeared, but they continued with their burden to the hospital.

SCIENTIFIC RE- SEARCH

Australia To Contribute To British Institutions

The Australian Government is to contribute financially towards the maintenance of certain institutions in England engaged in research work of significance to Australia.

The Minister in Charge of Development (Senator McLaugh-lan) says that a determined effort is being made to sustain the major lines of research work which the Empire Marketing Board supported when it was in existence.
Senator McLaughlan said the Marketing Board had stimulated Empire work in many directions, including horticulture, entomology, food, preservation and transport and forest products and pastures. The passing of the board created a serious situation only to be met by concerted action on the part of the various sections of the Empire.
The British Government had

AMERICAN TRADE

JAPAN'S BOOST
IN HAITI

By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages, Ltd., London, 1934. Received June
11, 7.55 a.m.

Washington, June 10.

The great expansion of Japanese trade that has followed her mercantile invasion of the Caribbean is further revealed by Department of Commerce reports on Haitian foreign trade.

The report shows that during the first seven months of the Haitian fiscal year, which started in October last year, Japan had furnished more than fourteen per cent. on Haitian imports, taking a leap into second place.

The only country supplying more is, naturally, the United States, which provided no less than fifty-three per cent. of the total, although this percentage is lower than the U.S.A. has been accustomed to expect.

Imports from Japan have gained steadily in the last two years, although Japan is taking only one-tenth per cent. of the total Haitian exports.—United Press.

THE FUTURE OF THE BATTLESHIP

"Battleships are the backbone of the United States Navy," declared Mr. Swanson, the U. S. Navy Secretary, last week. This statement indicates that a good deal is likely to be heard at next year's Naval Conference regarding this type of warship. Battleships have been ignored at naval parleys ever since the historic Washington Conference of 1921, with one or two exceptions none having been launched since then. Naval competition of the past decade has been in cruisers and auxiliary craft. At the back of the differences between the Powers over the future of the battleship, strategic considerations play an important point. But the chief factor is the inability of naval experts to agree on what role the battleship will play in future naval warfare. The evolution of these gigantic fighting ships is interesting. Originally the battleship was simply a grown-up cruiser. The old-time "line of battle ship" of sailing days had three gun decks where the frigate, or cruiser, had but one. She presented her battery in three tiers; otherwise, she was just like the smaller craft. The evolution of the revolving turret, led to a new kind of battleship, one which had a strong secondary battery arranged in a broadside, and a big-gun battery of four guns, mounted in pairs in turrets. Then came the dreadnaught type, in which four or six turrets were mounted on a line amidships, capable of being fired on either broadside, and the secondary battery was reduced to unimportance. It was then that the battleship really began to grow. Hulls were made larger and larger, armour plate was made heavier and heavier, the big guns were made more and more powerful; and now we seem to have reached the limit of useful size, so that some experts doubt if the huge battleship is really worth what it costs. A large-scale naval war would no doubt settle the relative value of the different types of fighting ships, but it is to be hoped that the argument will never be settled in this way. So long as the argument is merely an academic one as between naval experts, nobody need worry greatly about the issue.

FUTILITY OF ARMAMENT

French newspapers are now worried by reports that Germany is constructing a chain of bases along the frontier, ready to shower a vast number of explosive rockets all over France. One newspaper says that projectiles capable of travelling 125 miles have been developed, and it is estimated that with a large chain of rocket bases Germany could dump 60,000 tons of high explosives on French soil in one night. The French frontier forts may be invulnerable; but what, asks a Paris paper, is the use of them, if France may be dead and burned behind them? One might go farther. What is the use of preparing for war at all, if weapons against which there is no defence can be used against you? Or, for that matter, why try to keep civilization alive, if we are all preparing to blow it out of existence overnight?

I.L.O. IN SESSION

The International Labour Conference of the League of Nations is again in session. From fifty different countries have come representatives of governments, workers and employers to deal with working conditions throughout the world. As usual, the Director of the International Labour Office at Geneva (Mr. Harold Butler) has prepared an annual report which places the events of the last year in perspective. It reads like a report by the Economic Section of the League. But then, in these days when economics so frequently trespass on the ground of politics, still more do economics and the problems of industry overlap. Mr. Butler makes the point that effective action cannot come from either industry, finance or governmental intervention alone. What is needed is joint action with all three factors working together.

ECONOMIC NATIONALISM

Economic nationalism, of which there has been such a striking recrudescence in recent years, he condemns as extremely dangerous. Apart from its effect upon trade and industry, it is bound to influence political relations between States. A minor tariff wrangle, he points out, may develop into a major political question, producing a new source of apprehension in an already distracted world. A strong lead is needed towards a more rational organisation of the world's economic life. The remedy is not obviously in the hands of the Organisation and the value of its conventions must not be underestimated.

WAR DEBTS—A SALVAGE JOB

What can be salvaged out of the war debt wreckage? Can the United States collect anything more from debtors gratuitously affronted by the Johnson Act? Can Britain, France, Italy and all the other debtors save themselves from final classification as repudiators of their obligations? Above all, can the nations rescue any scraps of mutual good will, so shredded by constant bickering? These things are worth saving. And it would seem that fifteen years' experience with wrong methods might have brought the governments to some willingness to try another way. For both debtor and creditor peoples the choice is clear. They must choose between some salvage and total loss. They must decide whether they want to avoid default or justify it—to themselves. They can either reach a settlement or make beautiful explanations of their inability to settle. Will they make a last effort or will they continue to indulge their fancy for futile recriminations?

THE OTHER VIEWPOINT

The world cannot be concerned now with naturalness or the justification of grievances. The question is, What can be salvaged? If it would have done any good to continue gesturing with ten per cent. payments, the creditor and the debtors might have endeavoured to find a way around the Johnson Act. But any such effort would surely be a staving off of the necessity for a real settlement. Anything that can be salvaged should be welcomed. Especially if in the salvaging process the nations show that they have gained some appreciation of the fact that justification of oneself and condemnation of others do not make for satisfactory relations. Consideration of the honest viewpoint of the other side, is an essential in diplomacy as in managing children. If the nations can even glimpse that fact, they will salvage something from the war debt wreckage.

THE MAD RUSH OF HISTORY

By WALTER CREIGHTON

ANYBODY who undertakes the production of a great national spectacle such as the Pageant of Parliament becomes open to a good deal of criticism. For the story of Parliament is the story of England, and that can never be sufficiently portrayed in a spectacle lasting some three hours.

Fortunately, Sir Courtenay Ilbert, into Clerk of the House of Commons, in his "Short History of Parliament," divided this story into four great periods—"the period of the mediæval Parliament, of which the first Great Parliament summoned by Edward I. became the model and type; the period of the Tudors and Stuarts, having for its central portion the time of conflict between King and Parliament; between prerogative and privilege; the period between the Revolution of 1688 and the Reform Act of 1832; and the modern period that began in 1832."

With these four periods as the outstanding theme in the book of the Pageant, it then became a question of elimination.

The broad outline of these four periods could be filled in by a multitude of incidents illustrating events that stirred the soul of England. But there is such a mass of material, and so little time for the portrayal of scenes that illustrate a period covering some seven hundred years, that a great deal had to be left out in order to make room for outstanding events in the development of Constitutional Government. In some instances, as much as seventy years has been passed over in order to keep pace with the mad rush of history.

Great Parliamentary personalities had to fade before great Parliamentary happenings, and dramatic licence had to overweigh historical timing, without outraging the broader lines of accuracy. Strict attention to detail is of no avail in the Royal Albert Hall, which demands broad outline, brilliant splashes of colour, stirring movement, and, above all, speech in drama. Outstanding scenes illustrating the four great Parliamentary periods had to be joined up by intimate scenes in the lives of Kings and subjects, sometimes to form a link in historical sequence, but more often to bring relief in the narrative by glimpses of beauty in the traditions, arts, and literature of the day.

As it is the object of the Pageant to show how personal liberty depends upon a representative form of government, the first great picture obviously had to illustrate how the united will of the clergy, barons, and people forced King John to safeguard their rights by sealing Magna Carta. Then, because of his recognition of these rights, Edward I. summons the first Great Parliament, on which all future Parliaments are to be modelled. By his pronouncement to his assembled subjects, "What touches all should have the consent of all," he acknowledges that balance between the will of the Sovereign and the will of the people must always be the foundation of Constitutional Government.

King Edward had learnt that, without the people's consent, it was becoming impossible for him to raise money for the wars which at that time were regarded as proof of successful kingship. The people in turn were rapidly learning that they were in a position to bargain with their Sovereign for security, which every citizen realised was the only sure way of obtaining prosperity. It was this political game of give and take, at first begun so crudely, that later grew into the intricate political machinery which we know to-day. Then we see this ingenious political apple-cart disastrously upset as England becomes the tilting ground for the Wars of the Roses—the result of a brawl between two proud lords, whose power had grown greater than the authority of the Sovereign. During the following years of chaos the people went on quietly with their daily tasks, bored by the continual warfare between the Houses of York and Lancaster.

Thus it was only when the House of Tudor came to the throne that the balance between King and people was again brought into play. But this balance was quickly over-weighted on the side of Monarchy, owing to the mental astuteness and ability of the Tudors. They realised what an admirable instrument for their schemes could be made of a Parliament weakened in its Upper House through the slaughter of the Wars of the Roses, and ineffective in the Lower House through lack of experience.

Parliament soon began to realise that, as a result of voyages of discovery, in which English sailors and adventurers led the way, England was beginning to have a great influence upon the world. By degrees it learnt its power, and presumed to advise and even to withstand the will of the Sovereign. So we see Elizabeth enraged at the impertinence of her Ministers who dared to dictate to her about marriage and the succession to the throne. Finally, through her great love for her people, her political genius, and the supreme intuition of her woman's wit, she realised that to have governed with the affection and approval of her people was the richest jewel in her crown.

Queen Elizabeth stands out in history, a brilliant example of how this overbalancing in the scale of Sovereign and people could successfully triumph through an astuteness that continually recognised the real importance of the people, and could rule them through this loving recognition. This wonderful relationship between Elizabeth and her subjects must be one of the outstanding features of any pageant dealing with Constitutional history.

Next we see the perils which come from forcefully overweighing this balance evidenced by the tragedy of Charles I., who clung to Royal prerogative in his disastrous fight against the rights of Parliamentary privilege. The ensuing failure of despotism as practised by Cromwell is another example of the folly of attempting to diamas Parliament.

Later we see Parliament organising itself on stronger lines so that, after years of muddle and disaster, it can take matters into its own hands.

The Very Idea!

NEW SERIAL STARTS

By George

THE woman who has sued for restitution of conjugal rights because her husband never smiled at her and never tried to bring a smile to her face, seemed to think that marriage is a laughing matter.

After all when they married the joke was on him but you can't keep a joke fresh for a life time. Of course it may be that he has not seen the point yet but that should be soon remedied if his wife succeeds in her application.

Applications for separation are getting more and more technical and women have to be very original to keep up with the fashions.

The woman who sued for separation on the grounds of mental cruelty alleging that her husband used to point at her with his tooth-pick everytime she began a dish, has been outclassed by another who said her husband alienated her canary's affections and taught it to spit orange pips at her.

There was also a case of physical cruelty where the husband used to make his wife share his whoopee parties and drink as much Epsom Salts as he drank of Scotch.

But the scale is gradually turning the other way, as witness the Hebrew who had his wife bound over not to thrash him for a year.

THE GOLDEN CANDAREEN

Dorothy Gonzalez van Basto

Contributed.
It was eventide at Hongkong. Far away from the Lyemoon Pass came a subdued murmur from the Mangrove swamps. It was the noise of myriad snipe and teal as they laid their eggs with a plo in the silvery but odiferous mud. In the nullahs—coolies—could be heard engaged in their evening ablutions while from far up in the hills came the harsh grunts of the muske bird, as she caught the elusive fireflies one by one, and distinguished their luminous armatures.

Clad in white duck and seated on the verandah of her tiny bungalow was Madge Lestrangle. The deep lines on her face, her swarthy complexion and her rugged eyebrows told of long residence in tropical climes.

Carelessly she tossed her half-smoked Iain de Perfectos cheroot into the Cassia plantation where it was later in the evening discovered and enjoyed by a chair-boy. With a fierce Chinese oath she instructed the amah to bring out the fan-tan table and for lack of something better to do, won $46 from the trusty slave in a few minutes.

Yes, Madge was a true daughter of the East, more to be pitied than envied. Her father was a successful tea-taster at Canton but of later years had developed a liking for samshu. Madge was now the only sane member of the queerly assorted couple and they lived in this small bungalow rented from the English Trading Investment Co., Ltd., a Chinese concern managed by Greek, Parsee and Kowloon residents.

But it is with the son of the chairman of directors that we are concerned. Pale and delicate, noble and beautiful in character and feature, Reginald Hiploola de Jeejeebhoy of the P.W.D. was despite his name, every inch a man.

(What is Jeejeebhoy going to do in this first instalment of a thrilling narrative? We don't know yet, but we will think of something for to-morrow. Do you think we should kill him off in the first chapter and replace him with a sharebroker or a reporter? Perhaps we never ought to have brought him into this story but it's too late now and we will muck out of it somehow. In the meantime look out for to-morrow and see if the amah caught Missa, cheating while Jeejeebhoy, d.v., also saw her in the mirror of his little powder box.)

ATTEMPT ON LIFE OF JOSE RIVERA

THOUSANDS ARRESTED IN PEASANT STRIKE

Madrid, June 10.

A grim underground struggle between the Socialists and the Government is being relentlessly pursued. Political tension is acute and observers prophesy a desperate flare-up unless the situation undergoes a dramatic change.

Ruthless methods are being employed by the Government in efforts to stamp out the wave of popular reaction and thousands of political prisoners have been incarcerated in the last week or two.

The great strike of agricultural workers in Badajoz Province, affecting thousands of farm labourers, continues without a sign of a settlement. The strikers proclaim that they are prepared to see the finest harvest for half a century rot in the fields rather than yield to the demands of their employers.

FIERCE FIGHTING.

They say that they have starved for two years and can starve for a bit longer. At least a hundred and fifty thousand men are affected. Fierce fighting between the agricultural workers and the civil guards continues intermittently.

THOUSANDS IN PRISON.

The prisons in hundreds of small townships in the South of Spain are overflowing with thousands of peasants, who have been arrested for "coercion" during the peasants' strike.

Growing hostility to the existing regime is illustrated by two further events during the week-end, revealing the Fascist organisation as the chief point of attack. An attempt was made on the life of Jose Primo de Rivera, son of the late Dictator, and one of the principal figures in the Fascist Party. The front of his car was riddled with bullets, but Jose escaped unhurt.

STONED TO DEATH.

In the full view of hundreds of bathers at the fashionable Madrid bathing beach, Playa, on the Manzanares River, a sixteen-year-old youth, believed to be a Fascist, was stoned to death by Communists in bathing suits. —Reuter

FASCIST REPRISAL.

A vendetta between the Fascists and Socialist Youth organisations is feared as the result of what is believed to have been an act of vengeance perpetrated by the Fascists as a sequel to the fight on the Playa bathing beach this morning when Socialists stoned a young Fascist to death.

A party of Socialists returning from an excursion in the evening were fired on by men from a motor-car. An automatic pistol was used and three of the Socialists were seriously wounded. —Reuter

GORGEOUS SETTINGS AND COSTUMES

"La Vie Paree," the brilliantly-staged pot-pourri revue representing the first offering of the Marcus Show to Hongkong audiences, was an easy winner at the Queen's Theatre yesterday, when both "houses" were filled to capacity.

The title is meaningless. The show by almost any other name would be just as entertaining if the word is adequate to describe the net result of a revue that proceeds through a variety of comedy, gaudy ensembles, superb dancing and the last word in acrobatics at a breakneck speed that had the audience tied down so completely that they were afraid sometimes to applaud for fear of missing something in the turn following hot on the heels of a number that had already roused them to enthusiasm.

It is difficult to express general impressions of the show. All the superlatives have been used up in the ballyhoo of advertising preceding the arrival of the company. It almost suffices to say that ninety per cent of self-laudatory trumpet-blowing of the publicity expert told only half the story.

Most of the audience probably went to the Queen's prepared, by the very vigour of the boosting campaign, to be disappointed to some extent. But any prejudice taken in was rapidly thrown into the discard.

The orchestra set the tempo for the show with a rapid-fire jazz melody introduction that nearly brought the house down, and then the company dived into a breath-taking sequence of acts, succeeding one another so rapidly that the new had started almost before its predecessor had ended.

Outstanding, of course, were the ensembles. The gorgeously-costumed chorus girls against a dazzlingly-effective background furnished a beautiful pageantry repeated with infinite variety and skill in episode after episode. Spirit of the Vintage was highly flavoured and the lighting effect in the "Ivorian paradise," Trees, was delightfully in harmony with Lee Mason's song.

The male members of the show deserve special congratulations. Altogether, the production is one that amply justifies the enterprise of the promoters and the support of all in these days of de-

FIVE JAPANESE FINED

ARRIVAL WITHOUT PASSPORTS

Prosecuting five Japanese, including two women, before Mr. Hamilton, at the Central Magistracy this morning, for having entered the Colony without valid passports, Detective Sergeant Mottram asked that a lenient view be taken of the case, because it was really the fault of the shipping company.

Sergeant Mottram said all shipping companies had been warned months ago that the law with regard to passports was going to be enforced.

The defendants were Toshiro Hiroshi, Komeichi Nakamoto, Rokuni Kawamura, Wakabayashi Kiyoki, waitress and Abe Yoneko, widow.

Toshiro Hiroshi, as spokesman for the party, said they did not know they had to have passports, and the shipping company had not informed them about it. Had they known, they would have taken out passports.

Sergeant Mottram said defendants were among the passengers on board the Tatsuta Maru. They were brought to Court on the instructions of the I. G. P. and he had been asked to request that a lenient view be taken of the case, which was the first of its kind. Defendants were fined $10 each.

MAN WHO ESCAPED FROM HOSPITAL

AN ACUTE DISLIKE FOR CUSTODY

A man's adventures after being arrested for possession of 56 cabbies of pine trees were related to Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning when Cheng Ming, aged 32, was charged.

Detective Sergeant Poyntz said defendant was arrested by a Chinese detective on May 31. He escaped but in his flight, slipped and injured his hand. He was taken to hospital for treatment, but on June 7 was found to have disappeared from the ward.

Another Chinese detective, who had helped to take the defendant to hospital, found him in Sham-shu-po on June 8 and re-arrested him.

Defendant was fined $30 or six weeks.

PEAK TRAM PROFITS

TRAFFIC RECEIPTS FALL OFF

COMPETITION OF MOTOR-CAR

A falling off in traffic receipts, due to increased motor traffic to the Peak, and the fact that the lower terminus is situated at an inconvenient distance from the town was reported at the annual meeting of the Peak Tramway Co. Ltd., held at the Hongkong Hotel this morning.

Mr. D. Clark, president, and there were also present the Hon. Mr. Gordon Mackie, Messrs. J. Scott Harston and A. B. Stewart (directors), and Messrs. J. E. Jupp, J. A. Tarrant and W. C. Lee (shareholders).

Moving the adoption of the report and accounts, the Chairman said:—Profit on the year's working shows a falling off of $18,759.00 and this is accounted for by a corresponding drop in traffic receipts. There was a small saving in Maintenance and Repairs Account and stores consumed, but these are offset by the amount of $6,706.10 under the heading Special Repairs to Buildings. It was found necessary during the year to re-roof the Chief Inspector's house in Bowen Road, due to the ravages of white ants, and to renew the electric wiring.

Turning to the balance sheet, you will notice that the accounts have been presented in a slightly different form. This is necessary to comply with the new Companies Ordinance, but I do not think there are any items calling for special mention.

LINE EXTENSION.

The falling off in traffic receipts was not unexpected. Increased facilities for motor traffic to the Peak and around the Peak have no doubt affected our receipts. We are handicapped by the fact that our lower terminus is situated at an inconvenient distance from the town, and I am of the opinion that if permission to extend the line to Queen's Road at some future date can be obtained and the necessary land acquired, the extension should be carried out.

In this connection I will quote from an article that appeared in the China Mail of May 12, 1888, just before the line was opened to the public:—"Doubtless once the line is opened for traffic various improvements will be made in the cars, the landing platform etc., and perhaps the line will be extended at the lower end to Queen's Road."

Cars and stations have been much improved since that was written, but it would seem that the extension of Queen's Road is as far off as ever. The land required is owned by the Military Authorities and negotiations to acquire this, have so far been unsuccessful.

I have no further remarks to make, gentlemen, and I now formally propose that the report and statement of accounts for the year ended April 30, 1934, as presented be adopted. After this has been seconded I shall be pleased to answer to the best of my ability questions in connection with accounts shareholders may wish to ask.

Mr. J. E. Jupp seconded and the motion was carried.

OTHER BUSINESS.

Sir Robert Ho Tung, Mr. J. Scott Harston, the Hon. Mr. C. Gordon Mackie, Mr. A. B. Stewart and Mr. L. Kadie were re-elected to the Board of Directors, on the motion of the Chairman, seconded by Mr. J. A. Tarrant.

Messrs. Lowe, Bingham and Matthews and Messrs. Linstead and Davis were re-elected auditors on the motion of Mr. J. E. Jupp, seconded by Mr. W. C. Lee.

ROOSEVELT VISIT TO HONOLULU

JAPANESE HOPES FOR TALK. PRINCE CHICHIBU MAY GO

(Special to "Telegraph")

By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic News, Ordinance, 1895. Received June 11, 7.55 a.m.

Washington, June 10.

Japanese official circles, strenuously engaged for some time past in effort to improve relations between Japan and the United States, are considering the possibilities of a dramatic mid-Pacific meeting between President Roosevelt and highly-placed Japanese emissaries.

The President is expected to sail for Honolulu as soon as possible after the closure of the present session of Congress and Japanese leaders have readily seized upon the suggestion that the opportunity be taken for friendly conversations at this half-way house.

Observers point out that Prince Chichibu would be eminently suited for the mission on account of his popularity in the United States, his high rank and his relationship with the Emperor.

Such a meeting of Prince Chichibu and President Roosevelt would be highly significant as the Prince has just concluded a goodwill visit to Manchukuo.—United Press.

THEFT CASES

WOMAN STALL-HOLDER ROBBED

Four packets of "Bells of China" cigarettes formed the subject of a larceny charge brought against Li Fuk, aged 30, who pleaded guilty before Mr. Macfadyen in the Central Magistracy this morning.

Sub-inspector Dudge stated a woman was seated dosing at her stall when the theft occurred. A district watchman was handy by and witnessed it. A fine of $10 or fourteen days' hard labour was imposed.

A similar penalty was meted out by the magistrate to Lam Cho, 22, unemployed, who admitted stealing three tanner's tools and two rules from No. 5 Pottinger Street. The articles were valued at $8.

Ho Chun, 25, also unemployed, was fined ten dollars or fourteen days' gaol for stealing four aluminium pots from No. 21, Conduit Road. It was stated that after stealing the pots he hid them behind some houses at Tai-pingshan near Blake Gardens.

INDIAN CAPTURES

COMMENDED BY MAGISTRATE

The action of an Indian private watchman, Raj Dulla, was commended by Mr. Macfadyen in the Central Police Court this morning, for arresting a thief who stole a handbag from Mrs. I. Routley, of No. 9 Cumberland Road, Kowloon Tong. The bag contained $66 in cash and jewellery to the value of $35.

Defendant denied the charge, and stated that he bumped into the complainant and was accused of stealing.

Mrs. Routley, in evidence, stated she was walking along Des Voeux Road Central with Mrs. D. Nolloth, when the defendant, who was coming towards them, snatched her handbag and made off down a lane behind the Post Office. She gave chase and the man was caught by the Indian watchman. Mrs. Nolloth gave corroborative evidence.

Defendant was convicted and sentenced to six months' hard labour. Inspector James reported no previous convictions.

TRENT BRIDGE'S SECOND HIGHEST TEST SCORE

FARNES ANOTHER MAURICE TATE

TEST "SHORTS"

ENGLAND continue the Test match to-day at Trent Bridge, 246 runs in arrears with six wickets outstanding—hardly a position from which they can expect to win.

AUSTRALIA have a reasonable chance of earning this distinction: it practically depends on the pre-lunch play. If this goes in favour of the Australians, and they can obtain a lead of some 100 odd runs, they need only to score fairly rapidly to place England in a very precarious position.

AUSTRALIA'S first innings total of 374 was interesting from more angle than one. Apart from the fact that it illustrated a very fine recovery, it is the second highest score ever to be made in a Test at Trent Bridge.

THE biggest total to date is 426 for 5 wickets compiled by England in 1905. This allowed the home country to win by 213 runs. In 1930, when England won by 93 runs, Australia hit up 335 in their last innings and England 302 in their second knock on the same ground.

ALTHOUGH Chipperfield lost the distinction of being one of eight Australians to score a century in his first Test, he has probably established the record of being the first batsman to miss the honour by one run. Australians who topped the three-figure mark in their initial appearances are: C. Bannerman at Melbourne in 1876-7 (165 not out); H. L. Collins at Sydney, 1920-1 (104); R. A. Duff, at Melbourne in 1901-2 (104); R. Graham at Lord's 1893 (107); R. J. Harligan at Adelaide in 1907-8 (116); A. A. Jackson at Adelaide

A Chipperfield.

In 1928-9 (164), and W. H. Ponsford at Sydney in 1924-5 (110).

CHIPPERFIELD followed up his batting achievement by something equally as valuable to Australia, when he brilliantly caught Sutcliffe just at a time when the Yorkshireman was settling down to a typical century. Chipperfield held a hard cut through the slips with one hand as the ball was going away.

THE dismissal of Sutcliffe just at the time he was batting so confidently obviously had its repercussions on the succeeding batsmen. Neither Hammond nor Leyland shaped confidently after this disaster, and Hammond was out to an appalling stroke for a first class cricketer. Leyland's batting was "nervy."

GRIMMETT sustained the general opinion of the London critics that he is still the best spin bowler in the world by capturing the wickets of Sutcliffe, Walters and Leyland. It was a splendidly cunning ball which beat Walters, the amateur being completely deceived by Grimmett's action and the pitch of the ball.

KENNETH Farnes' figures scarcely pay tribute to the splendid work he did with the ball in his very first outing as a Test cricketer. Expressed in cold figures he bowled four balls short of 41 overs, ten of which were maidens, and took five wickets for 102 runs. For a fast bowler these are extraordinary fine figures and recall the non-hearted performances of Maurice Tate in Australia in 1924-5.

LESLIE Ames' wicketkeeping was apparently excellent. In addition to dismissing Ponsford and Chipperfield, two of the most important wickets, there were only ten extras in a total of 374. English supporters will be hoping that he will reveal his true value to-day when he goes to the crease.

HERE is a comparison in the fall of the wickets. Australia:—1 for 77; 2 for 88; 3 for 125; 4 for 146. England:—1 for 46; 2 for 102; 3 for 106; 4 for 114.

FAMOUS FOOTBALLERS TO RETIRE

Osler And de Villiers Leaving S. A. Rugby

Capetown, June 4. Pierre de Villiers and Bennie Osler, South Africa's famous pair of half-backs, will be out of the Rugby football game this season. It is something of a coincidence that the same season should mark the retirement from the game of these partners in five Test matches (three in 1928, one in 1931-32, and one last year), and countless Currie Cup encounters and trial games since 1925. De Villiers, who has rendered yeoman service to the Natal club for 10 years and been its captain for seven, is some years younger than Osler, but his active career has been a long, as well as a brilliant one.

H. Collaco and Miss Ciss Collaco; J. H. Pitt and Miss Nichols; V. G. Taussig and Mrs. Ovadia, byes. The first round is to be completed by June 15, the second by June 19, the semi-finals will be played on the Association court on June 23 or 24, and the date of the final will be announced later.

SWIMMERS KEEN ABOUT EMPIRE GAMES

CHANCE FOR JUNIORS WHO DO NOT ATTEMPT TOO MUCH

The announcement that three English nominations will probably be made for each of the individual swimming events at the Empire Games in London in August, will be warmly welcomed on all sides. It means that we may expect many new names to appear among the entrants for the trials next month, and the result may be that some swimmers of the rising generation, who do not consider themselves speedy enough to hold their own against a reigning champion, will find they are faster than they thought, and gain added confidence in their powers.

The action of the Southern Counties Executive in recommending Pittfield, street Baths as the venue for the Empire Southern Area Trials, and the installing of roped lanes will, I believe, with the unanimous approval of all the trial candidates, writes W. J. Howcroft in the Morning Post. The Hoxton Bath is exceptionally wide, giving a reasonably smooth surface, even when a field of six are competing.

In addition, the lanes will be a great aid to competitors in the 440 and 1,600 yards tests, as there are few swimmers who can keep a dead-straight course throughout a long swim. I estimate that roped lanes will be worth 10sec. or more in a 1,500 yards swim, and I shall not be surprised if other districts follow the example set in London.

The report of the Southern Executive meeting commenting on the poor response made by Southern swimmers at the preliminary trials may give the impression that there is a lack of interest in the Empire Games. Actually the poor support given to the trials shows that clubs and swimmers are not apathetic, but the reverse.

Last November many clubs, in reply to a request from the Coaching Committee, forwarded the names and particulars of swimmers who could be considered as potential candidates for the Empire Games this year and the Olympic Games in 1936. Then just before Christmas a circular was sent to the swimmers named giving a few days notice of trials to be held and asking which event the candidate desired to enter.

The majority of these candidates were under 16 years of age, with any experience of trial procedure, and many of them too inexperienced to know their best distances. The result was that club officials had to be hurriedly consulted. One club coach was called upon to give advice to twenty or more juniors who were not in a condition to race at such short notice.

It would, I think, have been more satisfactory if those responsible for the nominations had been consulted, and the circular filled in by them, especially as club officials generally were not convinced that the trials were of any great use.

CLUBS AND THEIR STARS.

Club officials also view with concern a recent development which calls for appearances from front-rank swimmers at week-end fixtures on the coast. It is not equitable that members who have been released from club engagements to enable them to be fit and fresh for the Empire Trials should turn out for other organisations.

The swimmers in question are often young and inexperienced, and they naturally look on these holiday trips with favour. In my own case, hardly a day passes without one or more of my pupils being invited to make an appearance involving a long journey and a hard race.

In a way it is a compliment for a comparatively unknown man to be invited to appear outside his own area, or against a foreign crack, but experience shows that these outside trips do more harm than good. This season my advice has been to refuse all extra engagements until after the Empire Trials, and I am confident that those who do so will profit by it.

Many promising juniors are bewildered by contradictory advice from well-intentioned outsiders. On

Hongkong Cycling Club

YESTERDAY'S ADVENTUROUS TRIP THROUGH THE TERRITORIES

The Hongkong Cycling Club's run yesterday fully came up to expectation in so far as enjoyment was concerned, though the poor state of the paths and tracks explored succeeded in keeping the zest for high mileage in check. It was 8.30 a.m. when Mr. H. A. G. Kewes led the party from the Ferry by way of Matankok and Kowloon Old City, passing Ngauvau and its "Home for the Aged" on the route to Customs Pass. No member wishing to enter the Home, the Club reached the head of the Pass after a hard climb intact in numbers. Here the right hand fork was taken and some delightfully unique views of the Island, Harbour, Kowloon and the Lion Rock with its neighbouring hills were enjoyed from the heights of Anderson Road (built in 1913).

Ye followers, beavered Anderson Road is but a name; one requires nimble wits and a supple body to circumvent the traps of Nature along this wild track. Throughout its entire length one finds a well of soft or rock to the left whilst on the right the ground falls sheer with a drop varying from a few feet to several yards. The beauties of waterfalls and silent pools have already been enlarged upon; their charms were no less on this run though they were often the cause of numerous patches of slimy mud which added to the treacherous qualities of the thrilling ride. To those cyclists who accept its challenge in the future, however, the Club's unanimous remark is added—"It is worth it."

Hendren With The Amateurs

THE CRITICS WIN AT LORD'S

The M.C.C. last month bowed to a storm of criticism which had arisen because Hendren, being the only professional player, had to enter the field by a different gate from that used by the other 21 during the Australians v M.C.C. match.

The murmur of disgust from the crowded stands was very noticeable on the Saturday, but on the Monday, when soon after noon he emerged from the professional's entrance to take the field against the Australians a good minute after the ten M.C.C. amateurs had left the pavilion, it was much stronger.

It was followed by a prolonged cheer, which in volume was quite ten times greater than that which had greeted the whole of his amateur colleagues.

A CHANGE AFTER LUNCH. In the lunch interval someone in authority must have thought matters over, for before the team reappeared Hendren was sent for by his captain and the whole side entered the field from the pavilion, whence there was appreciative cheering.

The same procedure was followed after the tea interval. When the M.C.C. entertained the Australian team to dinner Wood-fall congratulated Hendren on his great innings on Saturday, "I hope," he said, "he will be the lone hundred maker against us during the tour."

CRICKET CLUB DRAWS

HOME SECRETARY'S LETTER

Fears that sports clubs may be wiped out by the provision of the Betting Bill have produced a reassuring statement on the Government's intentions from the Home Secretary, Sir John Gilmour, in a letter to Sir Edward Campbell, M.P., a vice president of the Club Cricket Conference.

Following a letter from the secretary of the Polygon Cricket Club, which reached the Home Secretary through Sir Edward Campbell, the Home Secretary, in his reply, stated:

"In practice the authorities do not interfere with lotteries if they are genuine club schemes and not disguised public lotteries, though as the law stands it would be open to any private individual to institute criminal proceedings, even in the case of small genuine club lotteries."

"Such a situation is admittedly unsatisfactory, and the intention of the Bill is to legalize harmless draws, the promoters of which are at present liable, not merely to a fine, but to imprisonment for three months."

"The conditions proposed in the Bill have been framed with every desire to reduce to a minimum the restrictions on the promotion by clubs of harmless schemes for the purpose of raising funds."

UNLUCKY SOCCER COLOURS?

Mansfield To Revert To Amber And Blue

To appease those supporters who have complained that Mansfield Town have had consistent bad luck in the Football League since they adopted blue jerseys three years ago, the directors have decided to apply for permission to revert to amber and blue, the colours they wore in the successful Midland League days. They wore them in 1923, when they defeated Barrow and Wolverhampton and lost to Arsenal in the F.A. Cup.

Mansfield have signed Desmond Fawcett, a goalkeeper from York City and formerly with Preston. Millwall have signed on R. N. Clark, a goalkeeper from Gateshead. He is 22 years of age, stands 5ft. 10in. and weighs 21st.

Crystal Palace have secured from West Bromwich the transferee of Magee (right half-back) and Handley (inside-forward). Magee, who played against Wales in 1923 and Scotland in 1925, signed for the Albion in 1919. Originally an outside or inside-right, he became one of the ablest right half-backs in football.

Harbet, the Barrow full-back, has joined Stoke.

CHAMPIONS AND THE U.S.R.C.

CLASH IN "A" & "C" DIVISIONS

The visit of the United Services Recreation Club to the C.R.C., present champions, is the tit-bit of to-day's mixed doubles programme.

The United Services, enjoying the services of several fine players, are making a big bid for the title, and unless there is a strengthening of the Causeway Bay team everything points to another win for the U.S.R.C.

The Kowloon Cricket Club, hot on the heels of the Services are at home to the L.R.C., and ought to win. In view of the somewhat unsuccessful partnership of E. F. Fincher and Mrs. Miller, the K.C.C. may benefit from making an experimental change in the team.

To-morrow, one of the best ties in the "A" Division is the visit of South China to the Recreio. Last week the Portuguese showed good form against the K.C.C., and are without doubt difficult to bent on their own courts. Their forceful type of play may be even more successful against the Chinese.

Apart from the Recreio's visit to the University, Thursday "B" Division programme appears to be somewhat featureless, but on Friday, in the "C" Division, South China, regarded by many to be as powerful a side as the C.R.C., entertain the Recreio, and this should provide some spectacular tennis. Craigsrower have an interesting match against the Civil Service, but the other leading teams should enjoy easy successes.

SEMI-FINALISTS IN EUROPEAN ZONE OF DAVIS CUP

Czechoslovakia, France Switzerland And Italy

London, June 9. With everything depending on the last match, there was a dramatic finish to the Davis Cup tie between France and Germany in Paris to-day, France eventually emerging victors by the odd ruber in five.

The turning point came in the doubles victory of Borotra and Brugnon, who beat Von Cramm and Donker after a four set match. Forty eight games were played before the decision was reached, and the German pair went very close to winning the fourth set after annexing the first.

Von Cramm continued his winning way in the singles by out-playing Christian Bousnau in three sets, and this put the countries level, with the match depending on the game between Andre Merlin and Nourmay. Merlin rose gallantly to the

The surprise of the afternoon was the victory of "veteran" Boxing Eve, who won against a field which included Racing Triumph and Daylight Eve. Mr. G. A. Harriman rode a brilliant race.

SURPRISES IN LAWN BOWLS

K.B.C.C. HOLD A CLEAR LEAD

FOR FIRST DIV. CHAMPIONSHIP

Thanks to the very fine performance of the Club de Recreio, who defeated Craigen-gower first string on Saturday, the Kowloon Bowling Green have assumed a lead in the first division of the lawn bowls league from which it will be very difficult to dislodge them.

The K.B.C.C. themselves won very easily and have now the maximum points from half a dozen games, trailed by Craigen-gower teams with eight and six points respectively.

As hinted in these columns on Friday, the Recreio found inspiration in playing on their own green, and in beating Craigen-gower by a dozen points, finished up on two of the three rinks.

The Indian Recreation Club continued their run of successes in the second division with a very fine win at the expense of Civil Service, but at the moment they are headed by the Police for the leadership, the latter having a better average of winning shots.

A rare occurrence was the double success of the K.C.C. teams. The seniors took points away from Takoon, and the juniors took all of the Electric.

POPULAR EVENT AT NORTH POINT ON SATURDAY

A record crowd, including many distinguished members of the European and Chinese communities, witnessed representatives from nearly all the local swimming Clubs compete in the special charity swimming gala organised by the South China Athletic Association, in aid of the Society for the Protection of Children, at their Pavilion at North Point on Saturday night. At the conclusion of the events, Lady Southern, wife of the Colonial Secretary, distributed the prizes.

Four of the five open events were carried off by Chinese Clubs, the V.R.C. winning the Men's team race as the only honour for the outside swimmers.

Miss Young Sau King, China's lady champion and Far Eastern champion, was very much to the fore, securing the open ladies' 100 metres event without serious competition. It was regretted that no opposition was offered by the European swimmers in this race.

The S.C.A.A. Ladies' relay team, who were victorious in the Far Eastern Olympic games at Manila, won the open relay title, but not without a serious challenge from a comparatively weak Y.M.C.A. Ladies' team, who swam well to take second place.

The open breast stroke event provided a sensation when Min Chu Cheuk, China's second string at the Far Eastern Olympic Games, was beaten by his club-mate, Chan Fook King (S.C.A.A.).

Among those present were Lady Southern, the Hon. Mr. R. M. Henderson, the Hon. Mr. R. H. Kowalew, the Hon. Mr. T. N. Chan, Mr. A. Hicks, Mr. M. K. Lo, and many others.

Prior to calling upon Lady Southern to present the prizes, Mr. M. K. Lo, President of the S.C.A.A., said that much of the responsibility of the organisation and success of the gala was due to the energetic and painstaking work put in by Lady Southern. Sir Thomas Southern was prevented through indisposition from attending although he (Mr. Lo) knew very well that he was keenly interested in the organisation of a charitable swimming gala. The Society for Protection of Children and the Women's Auxiliary Committee had also contributed a large share towards the success of the function.

Mr. Lo also thanked the many who had helped in the arrangements of the gala; those who had sold tickets, and the China Emporium, Sincere, The Wing On, and the Sun Co., who had kindly donated the prizes.

$500 REAPED.

He remarked that he was glad to announce that the entire number of 300 tickets at $3 each had been sold, and that the sum of $900 would be given to the Society.

Lady Southern said that she would like to express great appreciation of the work the S.C.A.A. had done for the Society. The success of the function had exceeded her wildest imaginations, with an amazing large audience, beautiful races, and the immense enthusiasm of the competitors.

Lady Southern also referred to the work of the Society in Hongkong, and commented on the great help and assistance it offered to the welfare of the Colony. She was very glad that the Society had found in the S.C.A.A. an energetic and vigorous Club which would help the Society, and hoped that future connections with the club would always remain as successful.

THE RESULTS.

The following were the results:

Men's 200 metres Relay (four-side): 1. V. R. C. time 1 min. 17 sec. (W. Lawrence, E. L. O'Neil, E. B. Jones and L. Rosenfeld); 2. Chinese C.S.C. time 2 min. 4 sec.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

Solution to Previous Contract Problem

Don't lead a card blindly, simply because your partner has bid that suit. If your partner makes an opening and it develops into a good attack on the declarer, don't switch.

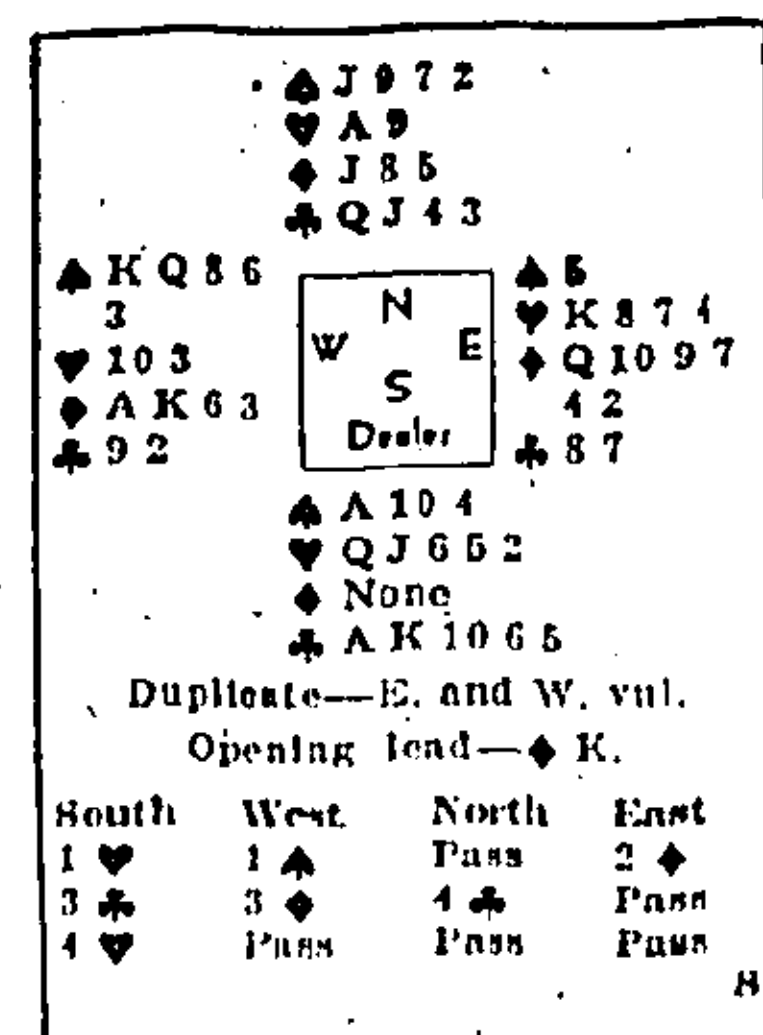

To-day we find East anxious to obtain a ruff. He has two losing hearts that can be picked up by the declarer; so, because his partner has bid spades, he wishes to try to get a ruff in. That permits the declarer to make his contract.

West's bid of one spade over one heart is, I believe very conservative. He should double. Of course, North and South will arrive at four hearts, and East and West could not make more than three diamonds.

The Play

The opening lead by West is the king of diamonds, which declarer ruffs with the deuce of hearts. He then leads a small heart, winning in dummy with the ace and returning the nine of hearts. East goes right in with the king.

His partner has bid spades—it looks as though, if he were to lead a spade, his partner might win with the ace and he could then get a ruff in with his seven of hearts. But if he had kept track of the trump he would know that South was down to but two trump.

If East returns a spade, South will win with the ace, cash his queen and jack of hearts, picking up the outstanding trump, and will lose only two spade tricks. With the king of hearts, which he has already lost, this gives him four odd.

If East, instead of leading a spade, were to return a diamond, South would be forced to ruff with the jack of hearts. Now South will lead clubs, but the third club will be ruffed by East with the seven of hearts.

East will then lead another diamond, which South will be forced to ruff with the queen of hearts. West will get out of the way with the ace of diamonds, and now the only other trick the declarer can win is the ace of spades, because when he leads a club, East will ruff, cash three good diamonds and, instead of making his contract, the declarer will be down three tricks.

Today's Contract Problem

Can you make six spades for South, with this hand? West opens the king of clubs.

PROMISSORY NOTE CLAIM

Kwong Tat Shing Tong, alias Kwong Wo, No. 1 night watchman of the South China Morning Post, was the successful plaintiff in a claim before the Chief Justice, Mr. A. D. A. MacGregor, this morning for $4,480 odd, the amount of two promissory notes and interest.

Defendant was Chun How-chuen, c/o Tai Ping Theatre, Des Voeux Road West, and he did not appear in Court.

Mr. H. C. Macnamara, instructed by Mr. F. G. Nigel, of Johnson, Stokes, and Masters, appeared for claimant and gained judgment for the whole amount claimed and costs.

Kwong Tat, brother of the plaintiff, said he lent the money out for Kwong Wo.

Plaintiff said that about five years ago he became entitled to about $8,000 from his father's estate and gave it to his brother to invest. When he tried to call in some of the money on promissory notes a year ago, defendant asked for time. Not a cent of the loan had been repaid.

hands and offer the Crown to William and Mary. So began another great epoch in the history of Constitutional Government, a period which saw the rise of the authority of the Prime Minister and his Cabinet.

But in less than a hundred and fifty years the people realised that Parliament, through whose support the Prime Minister and Cabinet ruled by the authority of the Crown, was in no way representative, and insisted on reforms so that their right of a voice in the government of the country should be real and valid. The Reform Bill was passed, and with it began the modern period of Parliament's history in which we are living today.

It is an enthralling story, this story of Parliament and the people, and it can be told only through broad impressions of great movements and happenings. Two great pointers must necessarily stand out—our destiny as a nation and the development of Constitutional Government. The Great War—the most terrible conflict in the history of nations—and the granting of the vote to women are inevitable landmarks. The exigencies of time make it necessary for the Pageant to ignore even the romantic story of the British Empire (a huge pageant in itself), and also those tremendous personalities, Disraeli and Gladstone.

We have not attempted to create a comprehensive picture gallery of Parliament. It has been our aim to provide a bold poster display which will convey a lasting impression on the minds of the spectators.
